FORD APPEALS FOR 'NEW REALISM'; ASKS CUTS IN TAXES AND SPENDING, SPURS FOR JOBS AND STOCK BUYING

House Committee Report Finds C.I.A. Understated Prices of Angolan Arms

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19—The Central Intelligence Agency has systematically undervalued, in some cases by half, the military equipment supplied to warring factions in Angola, according to evidence obtained by the House Select Committee on Intelligence.

The effect of the accounting procedures, valuing 45 caliber automatic pistols as low as $5 and 30 caliber semi-automatic carbines at $7.55, would be to undervalue the value of American aid.

By way of comparison, the retail cost of a new 30-caliber carbine is $76, and the inventory value of each of the 20,000 such weapons now stored by the C.I.A. is $15.

Investment Found Greater
The final draft of the House committee's report on the intelligence community, portions of which were obtained by The New York Times, concludes that the actual investment in the Angolan conflict, was greater than the $31-million the Ford Administration has told Congress it has spent since January 1975.

A C.I.A. spokesman declined to comment, but another intelligence source said the under-

Securities Proposal Would Defer Taxes On Money Invested

By EILEEN SHANAHAN
Special to The New York Times
WASHINGTON, Jan. 19—President Ford proposed tonight the enactment of a new type of tax benefit designed to encourage more people to buy common stocks.

The proposal was one of half a dozen major tax recommendations contained in the State of the Union Message, but was the only one that had not leaked out earlier.

The proposed tax-incentive for stock-ownership would not be granted to the wealthiest individuals, under Mr. Ford's plan, but would be confined to persons below the highest income levels.

The incentive would be the deferral of taxes, under specified circumstances, for some of the money invested in common stocks.

The cutoff point for eligibility for the tax-benefit is still unresolved within the Administration, but the Treasury Department has proposed that no one with an income above $40,000 a year be eligible.

The incentive plan and the cutoff point would have to be enacted by Congress as would all the rest of the President's tax proposals. Whether many or any of them would survive the legislative process in re-

STATE OF UNION

Congress Urged to Act With 'Common Sense' to Meet U.S. Needs

By JAMES M. NAUGHTON
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19—President Ford, declaring that "common sense" dictated a self-disciplined course at the outset of the third American century, called tonight on Congress to act with restraint in meeting the immediate needs and expectations of the nation.

The President asked the second session of the 94th Congress to reduce Federal taxes and curb Government spending, to bolster the economic base of the Social Security system, to spur private industry in creating new jobs and to give states and localities more leeway in using Federal funds for education, health and social services.

But Mr. Ford urged the Senate and House of Representatives to forgo massive, expensive new programs and search instead for a "new realism" in the relations between Government and the governed.

The President also asked Congress, in his second State of the Union address, to give him more flexibility to conduct diplomacy rather than less, and to resist the temptation to legislate "crippling" and dangerous shackles on the intelligence community.

Sober and Careful Tone
Although substantially more upbeat than a year ago—when he said bluntly that "the state of the Union is not good"—Mr. Ford set a tone in his 90-minute address that was sober and careful.

It was matched by the response of his immediate audience. Democrats listened with casual respect as Republicans on one side of the House chamber applauded.

Leading Democrats later described Mr. Ford's appearance as uninspiring and said his statements had reflected what Senator William Proxmire of Wisconsin called a "stand-pat" approach.

Mr. Ford's remarks were aimed principally, though, at the nationwide television audience and the 1976 electorate to which he said, "The state of our Union is better, in many ways a lot better, but still not good enough."

Proposals and Caution
But while the President outlined in brief his plans to seek tax relief for middle-income families, protection against catastrophic illness for the aged, tax incentives for expanding business and an expansion of Federal law enforcement forces, he cautioned against trying to do too much.

Government in America, he said in a speech laced with Bicentennial themes and allusions to founding patriots, has always had the best intentions.

"But in the recent past we sometimes forgot the sound principles that had guided us through most of our history," Mr. Ford said.

"In our rush to accomplish great deeds quickly," the President contended, officials in Washington too often created programs that "did not work."

Rizzo Forms Own Democratic Machine

By JAMES T. WOOLEN
Special to The New York Times

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 19—The steady rise to power of a man who once walked this city's streets as a policeman reached new heights today when Mayor Frank L. Rizzo divorced himself from the Democratic machinery that gave him his start in politics and formally created a separate organization of his own.

His move was the culmination of long months of a bitter struggle between him and Peter J. Camiel, the chairman of the Democratic City Committee, one of the country's most potent political bosses, a friend of Presidents and a confidant of national party leaders.

Now, while the smoke has not yet settled, most knowledgeable politicians here believe Mr. Camiel has been left with but the shadow of his once-powerful apparatus, and Mr. Rizzo, overwhelmingly re-elected without Mr. Camiel's help in November, has become the city's preeminent political figure, in or out of public office.

The Mayor is said to have 41 of the 69 ward leaders on Mr. Camiel's committee "in his pocket," and has tried to unseat the committee chairman by means of an unsuccessful recall petition.

However, the Mayor has decided to separate himself and create the new entity.

The Mayor now controls virtually all Philadelphia patronage, and with that, he has come to dominate Philadelphia's day-to-day politics. Those opposed to him, in or out of office, are impotent. Those who have supported him in the past, in or out of office, are now part of his bailiwick.

The Mayor's maverick group, called the Loyal Democratic Campaign Committee, could have a substantial impact on national politics this year, as he and his allies are planning to endorse a Presidential candidate in the Pennsylvania primary on April 27.

Until now, the Philadelphia Democratic vote, the state's most consistent significant bloc, has been the product of Mr. Camiel's preferences, and as a quasi-liberal, he has given MADRID, Jan. 19—The Government today drafted some 70,000 railroad workers after one of Spain's biggest waves of strikes in 40 years began to disrupt train service.

Already 55,000 postal workers were under military rule and subject to court-martial for refusing to work. The draft also hit some 1,000 Madrid subway workers after negotiations with the private subway company broke down.

The subway workers struck two weeks ago and troops took over the trains until they agreed to return to work. Since then agitation has spread through Madrid factories, banks, insurance companies and the building trades.

The strikes, called to protest restrictions on wage increases as well as on freedom of speech, association and labor organizations, have affected provincial

Race Quota for Principals Voided by U.S. Court Here

By ARNOLD H. LUBASCH
Special to The New York Times

A court-ordered racial quota for school principals here was overturned yesterday by a Federal appeals court that called it "constitutionally forbidden reverse discrimination."

The quota had been imposed by a Federal district judge here to protect the jobs of blacks and Puerto Ricans who were assigned relatively recently as principals or other supervisors in the city's school system.

In a 2-to-1 decision, reversing the lower court, the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit supported a school board procedure that was based on the seniority system's concept of "last hired, first fired."

The issue in the appeal concerned a procedure known as "excessing," which involves transferring, demoting or dismissing "the least senior person in the job classification" when

Lebanese Leaders Said to Enter Lebanon from Syria to Intervene in Fighting

By JAMES M. MARKHAM
Special to The New York Times

BEIRUT, Lebanon, Tuesday—Through the day yesterday, a constitutional crisis and a factional warfare between President Elias Suleiman and Prime Minister Kamel Chamoun, who resigned yesterday, have deepened.

Lebanese Government said yesterday that large numbers of Moslem gunmen were moving in the Bekaa region, near the Syrian border, Tuesday. Interior Minister Camille Chamoun, quoted by United Press International, charged that "the Syrian Army, based in Syria, crossed into Lebanon, to intervene in the fighting."

The Associated Press identified these forces as "Syrian Army troops, equipped with heavy armor and artillery." Karani, according to accounts, had agreed to consider his resignation if a fire could be arranged. A new truce, the 22d in a half month, was aimed to be in effect at dusk last night, but fighting ended, continued.

Lebanon Could Cause Intervention, Israel Says

JERUSALEM, Wednesday, Jan. 20—Israeli officials expressed deep concern yesterday over the intensifying fighting between the Syrians and Lebanese, both civilian and military, which could lead to a direct Syrian intervention.

U.S. Warns U.N. Against Bids to Change Basis of Mideast Talks

By KATHLEEN TELTSCHE Special to The New York Times WASHINGTON, Jan. 19—The United States warned in the Security Council today against any attempts to impose any changes in the basis for Middle East negotiations that the Council laid down in 1967 and 1973. In a low-key statement of American policy, Daniel P. Moynihan cautioned against changes that had been demanded by Arab members but opposed by Israel, which is boycotting the meetings because of the participation of the Palestine Liberation Organization. "Changes imposed on the parties and unacceptable to any one of them, however great the good will, will not work," the United States delegate declared. The United States has told Arab governments that it will veto any resolution dictating that the P.L.O. participate in the Geneva talks or attempting to set a new basis for an overall Middle East settlement instead of the Council's 1967 and 1973 resolutions. Mr. Moynihan, in his statement, stressed that Resolution 242 adopted after the 1967 war and Resolution 338, which led to the Geneva conference, had been accepted by the Middle Eastern governments and had been the "foundation for the progress that has been made, and they continue to provide hope for the future." Resolution 242, drafted with deliberate ambiguity, calls for Israel's withdrawal from Arab territories occupied in the six-day war in 1967 but balances this with an assertion about the right of every nation in the area, Israel included, to live in peace and security within secure and recognized boundaries free from threats or acts of force. There was no explicit threat of a veto in the American statement and one United States official remarked this would have been a needless provocation since no resolution text had been submitted. It was said Arab members tonight were in virtual agreement on a text but wanted time for consultations with others and so the Council agreed to meet on Wednesday.

Daniel P. Moynihan states the U.S. position in debate on Middle East negotiations at the Security Council.

No Surprises, Arabs Say Representatives from Egypt, Jordan and Syria said they saw the Moynihan speech as a reiteration of the traditional American position with no surprise. Montfiak Albat, the Syrian delegate, said he hoped for a "positive evolution" in the American thinking but had not yet seen indications of this. An Israeli representative watching from the sidelines indicated he was pleased with the American statement. Some diplomats remarked that the statement lacked the combative tone of earlier Moynihan speeches. This suggested that it was prepared in Washington and sought not to impair United States efforts to continue its "mediator" role in trying to reconcile Israeli and Arab differences. The statement nevertheless served to emphasize that the United States was the only power refusing to go along with Arab demands for Council recognition of the political rights of the Palestinians. In the debate, the phrase "political rights" has come to mean recognition of the Palestinian right to a Palestinian state—a goal Israel charges aims at her destruction. Mr. Moynihan in his statement, attached to the American readiness to cooperate in negotiating a settlement with all

U.S. Export Ban on Nuclear Equipment Urged by Former Atomic Energy Chief

By DAVID BURNHAM Special to The New York Times WASHINGTON, Jan. 19—The first chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission said today that the "impending disaster" of the rapid international spread of nuclear bombs required that the United States immediately and unilaterally end the shipment of nuclear equipment to all foreign countries.

"We have to decide now what we can do, now, within our own capabilities, to prevent a very bad situation from becoming a disastrous and inevitable one," he said. "I therefore propose as a private citizen that this committee, with its great prestige, call upon the Congress and the President to order a complete embargo on the export of all nuclear devices and all nuclear material, that it be done now, and done unilaterally," Mr. Lilienthal continued. "Further, unilaterally, the United States should without delay proceed by lawful means to revoke existing American licenses and put an end to the future of pending licensing to foreign firms and governments of American know-how and facilities paid for and created by American taxpayers' funds and American brains."

proceeding at a more furious and more insane pace than ever," Mr. Lilienthal said. "Proliferation of capabilities to produce nuclear weapons of mass destruction is reaching terrifying proportions." "If the system is inadequate—and there are several experts who insist it is—then we must acknowledge these inadequacies and organize our Government to deal with them effectively and fast," he said. "Otherwise our nation and the world are in peril."

The call was made at a Senate hearing by David E. Lilienthal, chairman of the commission from 1947 to 1950. Two fellow panelists at the hearing, Dr. Hans A. Bethe and Dr. Herbert F. York, said they would support a temporary embargo of nuclear shipments, now estimated to earn the United States more than $1 billion a year, if it was the first step in a major diplomatic effort to develop an effective international system to control the spread of nuclear weapons. Dr. Bethe, a Nobel Prize winner, director of theoretical physics for the Manhattan Project in World War II and professor of physics at Cornell University, has been an outspoken advocate of nuclear power as a source of energy. Dr. York, director of the Lawrence Radiation Laboratory at Livermore, Calif., during the development of the H-bomb, is a professor of physics at the University of California, San Diego. "If a great number of countries come to have an arsenal of nuclear weapons, then I'm glad I'm not a young man and I'm sorry for my grandchildren," Mr. Lilienthal, now the head of an international consulting firm, said at the Senate Government Operations Committee hearing. Six countries are known to have developed atomic weapons—the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain, France, China and India. But within four years, 28 countries are expected to be operating nuclear power reactors and developing within their borders a growing familiarity with nuclear technology. "The tragic fact is that the atomic arms race is today

Shah Criticizes U.S. Corbs KUWAIT, Jan. 19 (AP)—The multibillion-dollar economic cooperation agreement between Iran and the United States is in trouble because of American insistence on certain safeguards in handling nuclear assistance and on slumping demand for Iranian oil, the Shah of Iran said today in an interview with a Kuwait newspaper. The agreement, signed last March, promised to generate about $12 billion in work for American companies over the next eight years. The Shah complained that the United States was asking for unnecessary guarantees about the eight nuclear-power plants included in the agreement. "We gave them guarantees that these reactors will be used only for peaceful purposes and not for nuclear weapons," the Shah was quoted as saying. "But they asked unnecessarily for additional guarantees that we won't give."

Dr. York in response to the same question, said, "My views are similar to Dr. Bethe's. As the first part of a major initiative to try to do something, it seems valid." Mr. Lilienthal said that if the United States, the world's major nuclear supplier, unilaterally embargoed the export of nuclear equipment, the other countries that have gradually begun selling reactors and other nuclear equipment to less developed nations such as Brazil would also cease their exports. The two other panelists also offered suggestions about the steps the United States should take to curtail the spread of weapons. Dr. York recommended that it cut off all nuclear shipments to the scores of nations such as France and Japan that have not ratified the 1968 treaty on the nonproliferation of nuclear weapons. Dr. Bethe recommended that Congress immediately pass a law forbidding the export of this so-called "breeder reactor." This reactor, now under development by the United States, is designed to create more plutonium than it burns. In addition

Iraq, Protesting Bombs, Calls for U.N. Relocation

Special to The New York Times WASHINGTON, N.Y., Jan. 19—Iraq issued a protest today over an attempt to bomb its United Nations mission and said in a letter to Secretary General Kurt Waldheim that it was time to consider moving the world organization to another location. The Iraqi letter said that two bombs were discovered shortly before midnight on Jan. 12 at an entrance in the mission building at 14 East 79th Street. Abdul Karim al-Saiki, the Iraqi delegate, cited news reports that responsibility for the bomb attempt had been claimed by a group calling itself the "Underground Jewish Army" and the "Jewish Armed Resistance." He said that this was the third attempted attack on the mission since 1971.

Mr. Lilienthal said that if the United States, the world's major nuclear supplier, unilaterally embargoed the export of nuclear equipment, the other countries that have gradually begun selling reactors and other nuclear equipment to less developed nations such as Brazil would also cease their exports.

U.S. ROLE HINTED IN CYPRIOT COUP

Report Says Inaction May Have Been Intentional

By NICHOLAS M. HORROCK
Special to The New York Times
WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 — Officials of the State Department and the Central Intelligence Agency may have intentionally permitted Greek militants to engineer a coup against Archbishop Makarios in Cyprus, according to a report prepared by the staff of the House Select Committee on Intelligence.

The two-volume report, portions of which were provided to The New York Times today, will be considered by the committee in open session tomorrow. The staff report traced the events leading up to the coup in Cyprus in July 1974. It acknowledged that the United States had told its representatives to oppose a coup against President Makarios. "It is clear, however, that the Embassy took no steps to underscore for Ioannides (Brig. Gen. Demetrios Ioannides, who led the overthrow) the depth of the United States concern over a possible coup d'etat," the report said.

The report said at another point: "United States officials, knowing a coup was imminent, may have simply allowed it to happen." The report disclosed that it had information from intelligence sources that Roger Paul Davies, the United States Ambassador in Cyprus who was slain in August 1974, was killed by Cypriot police officers. The suspects, despite United States protests, have never been charged or removed from their jobs.

Suspects Identified
According to State Department officials, suspects in the ambassador's death were identified from commercial television films by the Cypriot police and United States Embassy security personnel. The ambassador and his secretary were killed by sniper bullets during an anti-American demonstration around the Embassy. They said that several written and oral protests had been made to the Cypriot Foreign Office and police authorities but that the suspects had never been apprehended. "They still go about their normal activities in Nicosia," one State Department official said.

This same officer, however, said that he believed that the United States had done all it could to force the Cypriots to bring the suspect to trial. The report also details a secret shipment of arms to Kurdish rebels fighting in Iraq. It said President Richard Nixon and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, over the objections of the C.I.A., ordered the C.I.A. to feed arms to the Kurdish rebels, at the request of the Shah of Iran.

"Evidence collected by the committee," the report said, "suggests that the project was initiated privately as a favor to our ally who had cooperated with United States intelligence agencies and who had come to fear his neighbor."

House Panel Finds C.I.A. Understated Angolan

marines have left themselves vulnerable to detection by the targets of their intelligence-gathering, the report said. Although many target nations, including the Soviet Union, claim a 12-mile limit, the report said the Navy allowed vessels to sail within four nautical miles of foreign shores. Despite these factors, the committee found, the Navy officially lists the submarine operations, which are designated by code words like "Holystone," as low-risk activities.

In public hearings, the committee had produced testimony showing that intelligence agencies failed to predict a number of international incidents, including the 1973 Middle Eastern war and the military coup in Portugal. The committee's report contains evidence of additional failures of intelligence in predicting the explosion by India of a nuclear device in 1974 and the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968.

Documents provided to the committee illustrate the uncertainty of the intelligence community over whether India possessed the ability to explode a nuclear device or its intention to do so. A C.I.A. post-mortem assessment declares that the lack of prediction deprived the United States of "the option of considering diplomatic or other initiatives to try to prevent this significant step in nuclear proliferation."

The assessment chastised the intelligence community for having failed to interpret available satellite photographs that were later found to clearly show India's nuclear testing facilities.

Prague Events Recalled
A similar failure, the committee report stated, occurred in August 1968, when the first word of the Czechoslovak invasion was passed to President Lyndon B. Johnson by Anatoly F. Dobrynin, the Soviet ambassador. The report said that not only did American intelligence fail to provide policy-makers with a warning that Moscow had decided to move against Alexander Dubcek, the liberal Communist leader, but the C.I.A. actually lost track of a large formation of Soviet troops that had moved into Poland.

Much of the House Committee's investigation focused on the processes by which intelligence operations have been funded and approved. The record conveyed distress at some of the panel's findings. In one case, which involved the supplying by the C.I.A. of weapons to Kurdish rebels in Iraq, the National Security Council's 40 Committee, which was set up to approve covert operations, was advised of the project by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger only a month after it had begun. The committee, which is headed by Representative Otis G. Pike, Democrat of Suffolk County, also said that it had found inadequate accounting procedures by the Office of Management and Budget to overseeing the $10 billion spent annually on the overseas operations of the intelligence agencies. That sum, never before disclosed, has been allocated to a handful of people with independent supervision, even inadequate controls, auditing and an oversight of security," the report said. In some cases, the panel found, funds were spent by the C.I.A. "to provide female companions and to people with questionable reputations to make pornographic movies for blackmail." The report did not elaborate. Balance sheets provided to the committee staff also showed that a medium-sized C.I.A. post overseas purchased $36,000 worth of liquor and cigarettes by given by agents to friendly officials of the host government. Another C.I.A. post, also identified, bought more than $100,000 in furnishings over the last few years, a quantity that the report characterized as only a small portion of the agency's total purchases of refrigerators, watches and other consumer goods. Although the C.I.A. is fully reimbursed for these administrative costs "as by American taxpayers," the report suggested that not all of these had been purchased for purposes, if provided, of actual mission of funds. The Pike committee also questioned the C.I.A. acting as a go-between of foreign officials overseas chasing American auto and consumer goods. Although the C.I.A. is fully reimbursed for these administrative costs "as by American taxpayers," the report suggested that not all of these had been purchased for purposes, if provided, of actual mission of funds. Ford Says Policy Abroad Is Weakened by Congress

By BERNARD GWERTZMAN
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 — President Ford told Congress tonight that its "hasty actions" in blocking activities of the Administration in Angola and elsewhere abroad were "very short-sighted" and had raised questions about the United States in the minds of allies and adversaries. In a brief foreign policy section of his State of the Union Address, Mr. Ford criticized efforts by Congress, increasingly pronounced in the last year, to play a stronger role in foreign policy formulation.

The most recent example underscored by the President was the Senate's refusal last month to approve funds for continued covert military aid to factions opposing the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola, which is supported by the Soviet Union. His remarks came just before Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger was to depart for Moscow for crucial talks with Soviet leaders on limitation of strategic arms and the situation in Angola and the Middle East.

Security Council Meets
Mr. Kissinger conferred with Mr. Ford this morning and participated in a National Security Council meeting that went over his instructions for his negotiations on Moscow, where he will attempt to unblock the stalled talks on curbing offensive strategic armaments and to get Soviet agreement to reduce involvement of the major powers in Angola. Mr. Kissinger will also seek to work-out arrangements for reconvening the Middle East peace conference in Geneva.

Mr. Ford told Congress that the American people wanted "strong and effective international and defense policies." "In our constitutional system," he said, "these policies should reflect consultation and accommodation between the President and Congress." "But in the final analysis, as the framers of our Constitution knew from hard experience, the foreign relations of the United States can be conducted effectively only if there is strong central direction that allows flexibility of action," he said, affirming a major complaint of the Administration against what it regards as Congressional interference. "That responsibility clearly rests with the President," he said.

"We must not face a future in which we can no longer help our friends, such as in Angola, even in limited and carefully controlled ways," the President declared.

"We must not lose all capacity to respond short of military intervention," he said. "Some hasty actions of the Congress during the past year — most recently in respect to Angola — were in my view very short-sighted. Unfortunately, they are still very much on the minds of our allies and our adversaries."

Making the Administration's customary link between strong defense and the ability to negotiate agreements, Mr. Ford said that "only from a position of strength can we negotiate a balanced agreement to limit the growth of nuclear arms."

On his trip, Mr. Kissinger will be in Moscow for only two working days — Wednesday and Thursday. After a four-hour stopover in Copenhagen tomorrow for talks with Danish officials, he is scheduled to arrive tomorrow night in the Soviet capital. He is due to leave Moscow on Friday morning for Brussels where he will brief allied officials on his talks.

On Saturday and Sunday, he will be in Madrid, where it is hoped a new agreement providing for continued American use of military bases in Spain will be worked out with the new Spanish Government.

This Fisher stereo system sounds even better when you hear Liberty's price

BRITISH WARSHIPS LEAVING ICELAND

London Agrees to Withdraw from 200-Mile Zone After Ultimatum by Reykjavik

Special to The New York Times
 BRUSSELS, Jan. 19—Foreign Secretary James Callaghan announced today that Britain will withdraw its naval vessels from the 200-mile fishing zone established by Iceland in 1974 to avoid a break in the relations between the two countries.
 In the day the British vessels in Reykjavik would have been withdrawn, relations on Saturday if the vessels and reconnaissance planes were not withdrawn.
 Callaghan, who held talks with Dr. Joseph M. A. H. the Secretary General of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in Brussels today, said that Prime Minister Hallgrímsson of Iceland will be invited to London to end the dispute. H. said tonight he believed the "generous" British would defuse the situation.
 Icelandic officials said that a break in relations could lead to withdrawal of their country from the Atlantic alliance, forcing the withdrawal of important NATO bases on the island.
 H. said he held talks with Icelandic leaders in Reykjavik and that he had proposed a compromise.
 Callaghan said today that British vessels would be withdrawn as soon as orders are sent to them, but that they would return to the disputed Icelandic Coast to continue to harass British vessels there. During the Icelandic boat rammed the British trawler 50 miles off the coast while trying to cut

Joint Assembly Held April 25

BANGKOK, Thailand, Jan. 19—North Vietnam and South Vietnam will elect a joint national assembly on April 25, according to a Paris radio broadcast today.
 The election date, one year after the final merger of South Vietnam by North troops, had been set by a body called the Reunification Conference on Reunification and endorsed by governmental groups in Hanoi.
 The new national assembly will be the legislative organ of a unified Vietnam, which Communist broadcasts said will come soon. No date has been set for the merger of North Vietnam with South Vietnam, which began on April 30, 1975, when North forces rolled into the South.
 The South Vietnamese administration of President Van Thieu said that the Communists moved quickly to indicate two parts, with many from the North taking positions in South.
 The Hanoi radio and on radio have said that the joint assembly will be held to approve a constitution for the country and set subject to nominal approval of the assembly. It will be charged with devising a name for the reunified country and approving a constitution.
 Saigon radio has reported that authorities have ordered a general census of South to facilitate the vote.
 A broadcast today said that the president of the National Revolutionary Front, presided at a Friday at which it was decided that the census should be held to provide reliable population data to simulate the people's will of the coming elections.
 North and South Vietnamese agreed last year that elections would be held in the first half of 1976 and that one representative would be elected to a national assembly for every 100,000 people. North Vietnamese population has been estimated at 24 million and South at 20 million.

RTS ON AZORES W. U.S. PROTEST

LONDON, Jan. 19 (AP)—The State Department said today that it had made strong objections to the Azores refueling stops for Cuban planes for Angola to refuse.
 A State Department spokesman, L. Funseth, made the announcement at a news conference published reports that such refueling stops were being made.
 The State Department, which governs the Azores, is officially neutral in the warring factions in its former colony.
 Funseth said that Cuban strength in Angola had 8,000.

BOOK STIRS FUROR ON LEFT IN FRANCE

Politicians Seek to Rebut Thesis That Cooperation With Reds Is Suicidal

Special to The New York Times

PARIS, Jan. 19—Leftist politicians in France are angrily trying to rebut the central thesis of a widely discussed new book by a political philosopher, Jean-Francois Revel, which argues that Socialists are committing suicide when they work together with Communists because "the essence of communism is Stalinism."

The book, "The Totalitarian Temptation," has already been excerpted by the biggest news weekly, L'Express, and is the subject of editorials, television debates and salon conversation.

One reason for the unusual interest is that the book was written at a moment when the French Communist Party, which has broadened its appeal, seems to have changed its strategy.

Following the lead of the Communist Party in Italy, the French Communists have been trying to show that they are dedicated to democratic principles and a pluralistic society and that they are independent of Moscow. Earlier this month the French party leader, Georges Marchais, announced over television that the party no longer believed in the dictatorship of the proletariat.

Mr. Revel, who in recent years has become a columnist for L'Express, owned by Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber, a wealthy, slightly left-of-center politician, is an unabashed defender of capitalism. He sees as its essential strength the capacity it offers for production and the guarantees it provides for political, individual and cultural freedom.

True Socialism Termed Rare

In his new book he writes that true socialism, which he defines as subordination of the economy to the needs of the greatest numbers of people, can exist only in small doses and "only in capitalist societies."

"It is an illusion of pro-Communist liberals of the left," he writes, "to think that there exists another communism than Stalinism."

The Stalinist system never changes, he contends, only the severity with which it is applied. "One cannot shoot and imprison everyone all the time."

Each time the non-Communist left tries to seek an accord of common program with the Communists, Mr. Revel maintains, it is destined for disappointment.

Taking up the cudgels, Claude Estier, in the Socialist Party newspaper L'Unité, charged that Mr. Revel failed to weigh the influence that Socialists have had in getting the French Communist Party to move farther and farther away from Moscow.

To please his "clients from the right" and help sell mazzettes, Mr. Estier charges, "Mr. Revel plays on a single tired theme."

"Whatever be the difficulties—and we know them more than anyone else—the Union of the Left is the strategic choice that has restored chances for social democracy in our country," Mr. Estier wrote.

The Socialist leader, Francois Mitterrand, running under the common program of the Union of the Left, won 49.7 percent of the vote in the presidential elections last May. But following the election of Valéry Giscard d'Estaing, a centrist, there

Pickets Shut Coal Mines In Southwest Pennsylvania

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 19 (AP)—More than 3,000 coal miners in southwestern Pennsylvania were idle again today as roving pickets halted mining operations.

Despite a temporary restraining order handed down in Federal Court here last Friday against miners at United States Steel Corporation mines in Greene County, more than 1,000 miners remained off the job. The strike that sparked the walkouts began last Tuesday in a dispute over seniority rules.

Latine Bell at Lloyd's Signals Costly Wreck

LONDON, Jan. 19 (Reuters)—The Lutine Bell was rung at Lloyd's of London today to notify insurance brokers of what could prove the costliest shipwreck in history.

A single note signaled the loss of the 223,963-ton Norwegian super tanker Berge Istra, which vanished in the Pacific on Dec. 29.

The sinking will cost the insurance market about $27 million. The hull was insured for $18 million and the iron ore cargo was also covered. About 70 percent of the insurance was placed in London and some in Norway.

The bell takes its name from the Lutine, a French warship captured by the British in 1793. She sank in 1799 with a cargo of gold, and the bell was recovered in 1859. The bell is sounded whenever Lloyd's gets news of an overdue ship—on for bad news, twice for good.

Few sinkings are confirmed beyond doubt. But Lloyd's considered that yesterday's rescue of two Berge Istra survivors was proof that the ship had gone down.

Socialists Split on Working With Reds

By BERNARD WEINRAUB
Special to The New York Times

HELSINGOR, Denmark, Jan. 19—European Socialist leaders concluded a two-day meeting today sharply divided over political links with Communists and uncertain about what tactics to use to counter Communist influence in Italy and Portugal.

At the same time, they made it clear that the economic gloom in Europe—and especially the unemployment problem—showed few signs of lifting and was emerging as a major political issue.

"We meet at a time when unemployment is more severe than for a generation," Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Britain told the assemblage of Socialists from 15 countries at a trade union college in Helsingor, 40 miles north of Copenhagen. "In the 10 industrial countries it now totals more than 14 million."

"In many countries," he went on, "unemployment is likely to continue to rise until well into 1976."

It was, nonetheless, the issue of Socialist links to Communist parties that was the most emotional and potentially divisive item at the meeting, attended by an array of prominent political figures. Among them were Helmut Schmidt, the West German Chancellor, Francois Mitterrand, first secretary of the French Socialist Party, Prime Minister Olof Palme of Sweden, Bruno Kreisky, the Austrian Chancellor, and the Socialist party leaders of Spain and Portugal, Felipe Gonzalez and Mario Soares.

Sources who had attended the closed meeting said that Mr. Mitterrand had been the firmest advocate of Socialist alliances with the Communists and that Mr. Schmidt had staunchly opposed him. This was reflected at a news conference tonight attended by the participants in the meeting, which was called by the Danish Social Democratic Party.

Mr. Mitterrand said: "I know some people contend that Communists cannot participate in establishing a healthy democracy. Some say they have no concept of democracy. We don't believe this."

The Communists are too powerful to ignore in nations such as France, Italy, Portugal, Finland and possibly Spain. The French leader went on: "Links with worker-based Communist parties are crucial to strengthen democracy, he declared."

Mr. Schmidt remarked that his views were "fundamentally different" from Mr. Mitterrand's. "We see no reason to engage in any kind of cooperation with the Communists," he said.

The German Chancellor said that Socialist links with Communists could endanger a nation's international commitments, such as membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the European Economic Community. "The country might not perform as it had," he said.

Trudeau, Rejecting Socialism Charge, Seeks Backing of Business and Labor

By ROBERT TRUMBULL
Special to The New York Times
OTTAWA, Jan. 19—Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, defending himself against charges of socialism and authoritarianism, asked Canadian business and labor tonight to collaborate with the Government in programs to cure the nation's economic ills. The only alternative to such voluntary moves is more Government control, he said, but added that he and his Government "reject socialism."
Mr. Trudeau made his remarks in a speech in a specially arranged dinner meeting of the Canadian Club, a private-club leadership group. The address followed a series of New Year's messages in which he declared that the free-market system, as it exists in Canada today, cannot work.
Business and union leaders, already angered over the wage and price controls enacted by the Government last month, condemned Mr. Trudeau's earlier statements in strong terms.
Gandhi Parallel Seen
In a typical reaction the president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, Garry Pearson, said in a speech in Edmonton two days ago that Mr. Trudeau's remarks "almost look like a declaration of war against the competitive enterprise system."
Critics compared the Trudeau system to the authoritarianism of Indira Gandhi of India. Some of the criticism was from members of the Party, which scored an overwhelming victory in the 1974 election.

United Press International
Pierre Elliott Trudeau addressing a meeting of the Canadian Club in Ottawa last night.

100 years, since the Government stimulated the building of the Canadian Pacific Railway, we have not had a free-market economy in Canada but a mixture of private enterprise and public enterprise."
"We Reject Socialism"
The Federal Government, he said, has a duty to intervene when necessary "to stimulate employment, redistribute income, to control inflation and pollution, to protect the consumer, to promote conservation, productivity and an adequate supply of the things we need."
"There is an desire on the part of the Government of the people of Canada to impose more regulation on the truly competitive sectors of the economy—the small-business sector, for example," he said.
"The preservation and strengthening of the free-market sector of our economy is absolutely central to the Liberal view of the Canada of the future," he asserted.
"That is why we reject socialism, which seeks ever-greater Government ownership and control."
He said that the mixed economy "is not serving us adequately right now," citing the nation's double-digit inflation and unemployment rate, which has exceeded 7 percent. The anti-inflation program just instituted, which restricts wage increases to a basic 8 per cent and price increases to no more than the amount of increased costs, "will give us the time to make choices" in the way the economy is to be managed, he said. "The fact is that for over Mr. Trudeau said.

GRAIN INSPECTORS INDICTED BY U. S.

3 Employees of a Louisiana
Unit Face Bribe Charges

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 19 — Three grain inspectors employed by a Louisiana government agency were indicted by a Federal grand jury here today on charges that they conspired to misgrade soybeans in return for $67,130 in bribes.

The action against the three Civil Service employees of the Greater Baton Rouge Port Commission came as Congress is scheduled to decide whether such state agencies will be permitted to continue inspection duties at grain export elevators.

The inspectors, who have worked for the Port Commission for 20 years, supervised the weighing and grading of grain at the Cargill Inc. grain elevator. Cargill was apparently a victim of the alleged scheme to commit public bribery and defraud the Federal Government, described in the indictment returned before United States District Judge E. Gordon West.

Inspection duties at the seven other elevators between here and the mouth of the Mississippi River have been handled by four private agencies. Inspectors from all four agencies have been among the 48 defendants convicted in the continuing investigation of grain industry corruption in the New Orleans area.

Reports of wrongdoing by private agencies' inspectors last year led the House Agriculture Committee to approve a proposal to abolish such agencies in the early stages of drafting reform measures, which are expected to be put into final form this spring.

Though the committee also tentatively approved the concept of assigning all export inspection work to an expanded Federal force, several members have shown a strong interest in giving states the option of creating their own inspection agencies.

Douglas M. Gonzalez, the United States Attorney here, led the investigation of other possible wrongdoing in the Baton Rouge grain trade was continuing with the aid of various Federal agencies under the direction of the New Orleans United States Attorney, Gerald Callaghan.

Named in the indictment were the chief inspector of the Port Commission's grain weighing and inspection division, Domennic Corrent Jr., and his subordinates, Anthony A. Ma and Edward M. Wydle. According to the indictment, the three inspectors proposed misgrading and bribery came in September 1973 to a country grain elevator operator in Port Barre, La., which buys beans and other grain from local farmers and sells it to the country elevator, Rufus Vert Grain Elevator Company, Inc., allegedly delivered beans by truck to Cargill.

The three inspectors systematically graded the grain as being of a higher quality than it actually was, the indictment charged.

The three inspectors received a total of $67,130 between Oct. 1973, and May 22, 1974, in separate bribe payments ranging from $500 to $3,000 each, according to the indictment.

Polish Tanker Cleared
(NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 19 (AP)) — A Polish tanker loaded with 2 million bushels of corn was given qualified clearance today after grain inspectors turned over their findings on the shipment to Federal investigators.

"The ship will sail promptly," said a spokesman for Cook Industries, the giant Memphis grain export concern that owns the corn in the holds of the tankered Rysy II.

FORMULA IS SOUGHT IN DOCTORS' PROTEST

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 19 (AP) — With renewed possibilities for negotiating state help, two committees of Southern California doctors began meetings today aimed at ending their 19-day slowdown.

The doctors, in a protest against soaring malpractice insurance rates, began the slowdown Jan. 1. Many have refused to perform all but emergency surgery.

The doctors want the state to run a doctor-funded malpractice insurance pool that would provide malpractice coverage, hopefully for less than insurance companies now want.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. said a condition for such state intervention should be that physicians provide free care for poor and elderly patients receiving treatment under Medi-Cal, a state-administered program that combines Federal Medicare funds and state money. The doctors cared little for the idea.

But at a weekend meeting with slowdown leaders and administrators of hospitals affected by the walkout, Governor Brown agreed to separate the issues.

Two doctors' committees formed to consider separately the problems of malpractice insurance and providing care for Medi-Cal patients, began daily meetings today.

When they arrive at firm positions on the two issues, the committees are to confer again with the Governor.

Many Prominent Americans Represent the Interests of Foreigners

By RICHARD D. LYONS
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19—Americans who represent or have been linked to serving the interests of foreign governments and businesses in the United States are almost a who's who of names in the news.

The wife of Senator Jacob K. Javits, Marion Javits, who is receiving $67,500 to promote Iran National Airlines, is but one of hundreds of Americans who are registered as foreign agents or whose law firms and public relations companies are.

The interests of Iran and its government are loosely linked with many other prominent names here because of the long fight to allow landing rights to the British-French supersonic transport, the Concorde. The Iranian airline has ordered two of the planes.

Arranged in favor of the Concorde is a battery of legal talent that includes well-known names.

Lawyers For Air France

Air France, which is seeking to bring Concorde service to both New York and Washington, is being represented by Rogers & Wells, one of whose senior partners is William P. Rogers, who was Secretary of State in the Nixon Administration.

British Airways, which also is seeking landing rights, is represented by Covington & Burling, a Washington law firm whose partners included the late Dean Acheson, Secretary of State in the Truman Administration.

The interests of the British Government in the Concorde controversy are represented by the law firm Ruckelshaus, Beveridge, Fairbanks & Diamond, which has as a senior partner William D. Ruckelshaus, who was the first administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency and a deputy attorney general in the Nixon Administration.

Billions at Stake

The French Government's interests in the protracted dispute are being handled by the law firm of Hydemann, Mason & Goodell. A partner in this firm is Charles E. Goodell, a former Republican senator from New York.

The amount of legal talent underscores the amount of money that is at stake in the case. Should the plane be banned from landing in the United States it could lead to the end of the $3 billion Concorde development program. Conversely, should landing rights be granted, there probably will be legal appeals by such protest groups as the Environmental Defense Fund, litigation that the Concorde's proponents might seek to challenge.

Mr. Ruckelshaus's firm also does legal work for Greece, while Mr. Rogers's firm represents the Shah of Iran's Pahlevi Foundation, which has invested in real estate in the United States.

John B. Connally, former member of both the Kennedy and Nixon cabinets, is a member of a law firm in Houston that has represented the First Arabian Corporation, an Arab-owned private investment bank in Beirut.

Richard G. Kleindienst, who served as Attorney General in the Nixon Administration, has filed a $120,000 contract with Algeria's Ministry of Industry and Energy. The contract calls for him to provide "legal counsel for business circles, congressional relations, and relations with various official government bodies in Washington and the rest of the United States."

Clark M. Clifford, former Secretary of Defense in the Johnson Administration, is senior partner in Clifford, Warwick, Glass, McIlwain & Finney, a law firm with offices here. The firm is recorded as having had a contract for services to the Algerian Government at a fee of $150,000 a year.

J. William Fulbright, the former Arkansas senator who was chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, now is associated with a Washington law firm, Hogan & Hartson, which represents interests of Japan and the United Arab Emirates. Mr. Fulbright has visited both areas lately.

John J. McCloy, who has held a series of important Federal posts such as High Commissioner in Milbank, Tweed, Hadley & McCloy in New York

According to the Justice Department in 1974, the firm represented the legal interests of a score of businesses in 10 foreign countries.

Kermit Roosevelt, a former State Department and Central Intelligence Agency official who is a grandson of Theodore Roosevelt, is associated with a business consulting firm here, Downs & Roosevelt. The firm has represented Portuguese and Arab interests.

Nuclear Power Study Set

The Ford Foundation announced yesterday a one-year, $874,000 program of studies of nuclear power, covering present knowledge and critical issues in what the foundation's president, McGeorge Bundy called "a confusing and often acrimonious debate." The studies will be organized through the Mitré Corporation, Princeton University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Coast Guard Commissions A $53 Million Icebreaker

SEATTLE, Jan. 19 (UPI)—The 399-foot Polar Star, the world's mightiest icebreaker, was commissioned by the Coast Guard during the weekend.

About 1,200 persons attended the ceremony for the $53 million ship built by Lockheed Shipbuilding.

The ship has a 60,000-horsepower diesel-gas turbine propulsion system and weighs 13,000 tons. She is the first new United States icebreaker in 20 years.

The Polar Star will undergo shakedown cruises around Puget Sound until April when she will head northward for her first icebreaking tests.

The ship will carry 13 officers, 125 enlisted men, a 15-member helicopter detachment and 10 scientists. The scientists will study marine biology, oceanography and weather while aboard the ship.

Colleague of Mrs. Javits Says She Is 'Considering Resigning'

By PETER KINSS

Marion Javits, wife of Senator Jacob K. Javits, is "considering resigning" the $67,500 consultant work on an Iranian public relations account that stirred controversy last week, her immediate superior said yesterday.

Marvin Frankel, president of Ruder & Finn International, said that Mrs. Javits was to discuss the question with her company colleagues tomorrow. He stressed that she was staying with the agency, for which she also became a salaried senior vice president last week, and added his own hope that she would stay with the account.

"She wants to think of it from her husband's standpoint," Mr. Frankel said. "Many people throughout the country have been writing her telling her to stay. Others have been asking her to rethink it. She is a woman of feeling."

Mrs. Javits was in Washington yesterday, her 51st birthday. In an interview with Barbara Walters on the NBC "Today" show, she said she had been "talking seriously to my husband" that she would certainly because this has embarrassed him.

"I hope to give honor to my husband who did not approve of what I was doing," she said.

The consulting job for Mrs. Javits, whose husband is a key Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, came to light when The Village Voice last week noted the registration she had filed last Sept. 10 with the Department of Justice under the 1938 Foreign Agents Registration Act.

Iran National Airlines Corporation and the Government of Iran had hired Ruder & Finn as general public relations counsel for the year starting last Aug. 1 on a contract reported at $500,000, which Mrs. Javits helped bring about.

Mr. Frankel said that Mrs. Javits was very familiar with Iran, having made four or five visits there. He said that she had worked on art projects for Ruder & Finn for "commensurate fees" over the last five years. As a senior vice president, he said, she could work on many different accounts, none at this point involving foreign governments.

"I think the controversy here is largely political," Mrs. Javits said. "I feel that Iran is an emerging nation. I think that her involvement politically with Israel is as intricate as it is with the United States."

Nadjari and Sandler Confer on Calendar

By MARCIA CHAMBERS
Leonard H. Sandler, the newly appointed special justice hearing cases brought by Maurice H. Nadjari, spent part of his first day on the job yesterday conferring with the special state prosecutor about pending prosecutions.

The justice met with Mr. Nadjari in his 17th-floor chambers at the Criminal Courts Building for nearly two hours. Mr. Nadjari said later that "we discussed calendar procedures and the assignment of cases and very little else."

Neither man would specifically discuss what is perhaps Justice Sandler's most important and immediate ruling: on a motion brought by Patrick J. Cunningham, the state Democratic chairman, and Bronx County leader, to quash a subpoena to appear before a special Bronx grand jury investigating the sale of judgeships in the borough.

Delay Expected

But in interviews with other legal and court sources it appeared that the Cunningham matter would not even be placed on the court calendar until the end of this week or early next week.

It appeared that Justice Sandler had not yet received the court documents submitted by Mr. Cunningham's lawyers and Mr. Nadjari to the late Justice John M. Murtagh of the State Supreme Court. Justice Sandler would first have to familiarize himself with those papers.

Thus, Mr. Nadjari said in answer to a reporter's question: "I'm not certain whether he will decide based on what is already on the record or whether he will hear new arguments."

Lawyers for both sides might seek new oral and written arguments, particularly since Governor Carey has yet to sign a proposed executive order that would give Mr. Nadjari clear authority to investigate political corruption in the Bronx.

Justice Leonard H. Sandler in his chambers yesterday. He met with Maurice H. Nadjari for nearly two hours.

The new order would presumably eliminate some legal arguments previously raised and add others.

Docket is Unclear

It is unclear just how many cases Justice Murtagh had before him when he died one week ago. Many indictments had been transferred to Judges Leon B. Pinsky and Howard A. Jones who are assigned to try Nadjari cases. The week before he died Justice Murtagh had about 70 cases on his calendars from the five boroughs. Some were routine monthly court appearances made by defendants and their lawyers who might be involved in plea negotiations or were awaiting trial. Some of these cases, court sources say, were transferred to Judges Pinsky and Jones.

Justice Murtagh's primary responsibility was overseeing the 15 grand juries. Thus, he had before him several pending motions to quash subpoenas. He also retained various legal orders, including writs and search warrants. Justice Sandler must also inspect these particularly if a writ or order is to be renewed shortly.

REHIRING OF POLICE AND FIREMEN URGED

Citing what he said were declines in police and fire protection, Assemblyman Alvin C. Hevesi, a Queens Democrat, yesterday proposed the rehiring of laid-off police officers and firemen by using $615 million in "rainy-day" city taxes over the next three years.

Mr. Hevesi's proposal, which appears in a bill he has introduced, would empower the State and the Emergency Financial Control Board to amend the fiscal plan it adopted last year for the city so that $205 million a year could be used for the rehiring of public employees involved in the protection of life and property.

At a news conference in the office of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, 230 Broadway, Assemblyman Hevesi said the new city taxes were not part of the state legislation adopted last September that mandated expense savings to help the city balance its budget.

The bill was introduced with State Senator Emanuel R. Gold, another Queens Democrat.

Mr. Hevesi said that 3,000 police officers and 35 companies of 25 men each had been eliminated for savings. "Crimes are increasing and more than 80 people may have died unnecessarily because of the elimination of fire companies," he added.

Laos Reports Clashes

VIENTIANE, Laos, Jan. 19 (Agence France-Press)—Laotian troops clashed with "traitorous reactionaries" in the southern part of the country on Jan. 10 and 11, the Government radio reported today. It said two of the "reactionaries" had been killed in the fighting in two villages in Champassak Province. A number of clashes between Government forces and dissident groups have been reported there recently.

THE HOLY LAND AT A DOWN-TO-EARTH PRICE.

Israel in winter is very much like Israel in summer. In Jerusalem, people still pray before the Western Wall and light candles in the Tomb of King David on Mount Zion.

On Fridays, the Franciscans still lead solemn afternoon processions along the Via Dolorosa, and just before sundown the sound of a trumpet still heralds the arrival of the Sabbath.

You can still walk the ground where the Temple of Solomon stood and gaze at the rock where Abraham bound Isaac.

You can still swim in Elat on the Red Sea, and Tiberias on the Sea of Galilee. Or float on the Dead Sea's buoyant waters.

You can still play golf in Caesarea and, for the 19th hole, explore the ruins of the Roman theatre. And wherever you go, you can still hear people speaking in the tongue of the prophets. But what makes this season in Israel different from all other seasons is the savings.

Between now and March 15, you can fly to the Land of Israel and back for only $519. For a little more, you can stay a little longer and enjoy a little more sightseeing. Either way, you'll spend considerably less than if you went in spring or summer.

Call your travel agent or mail the coupon to find out where to go, what to see and do, how to get around, and what to pack.

There are always good reasons for coming to Israel. But, as you can see, at this time of year there are better reasons than ever.

*Based on group economy class round trip air fare, applicable with purchase of $45 in land arrangements, now to March 15, 1976.

Save more than $250 compared to lowest summer prices. $519 Winter Special 10 Days/9 Nights Round Trip Group Air Fare.

Is there an answer to the smoking question?

Should people smoke? They've been battling that one since the smoking controversy started. Smokers have an answer. Non-smokers have another answer. And the critics of smoking think they have all the answers.

But arguing whether people should or shouldn't smoke isn't going to change anything. The reality is that people do smoke. And they will continue to smoke. No matter what anyone says.

So perhaps a more realistic question would be: what should a smoker smoke?

If some smokers don't want to give up smoking yet find themselves concerned about 'tar' and nicotine, then the critics could well recommend that they switch to a low 'tar' and nicotine cigarette. Like Vantage.

And if some of these smokers prefer a menthol cigarette, then the critics could suggest that they switch to a low 'tar' and nicotine menthol. Like Vantage Menthol.

Vantage Menthol offers smokers all the cool, refreshing flavor they could ever ask for. And at the same time gives them the substantial cut in 'tar' and nicotine they may be looking for.

Now Vantage Menthol isn't the lowest 'tar' and nicotine menthol around. But anything lower probably compromises the flavor.

So if you smoke a menthol cigarette, we're not going to argue whether you should or you shouldn't. The fact is you do.

And if you want to do something about 'tar' and nicotine, Vantage Menthol could be one answer for you to consider.

Appellate Division Weighs Challenge to Gag on Press

By MARTIN ARNOLD

After hearing oral arguments, the Appellate Division of State Supreme Court in Brooklyn said yesterday it would rule by Friday on whether to vacate a gag order against the press issued by the presiding judge in the murder trial of Robert C. (Sonny) Carson and five other defendants.

On Thursday, Justice John R. Starkey issued the order against Dena Kleiman, the reporter for The New York Times who is covering the murder trial. Yesterday, the judge said that the gag order applied to other reporters for the Times who might be writing about the trial as well as to the newspaper itself.

The Starkey order attempted to stop the press from printing certain background information about Mr. Carson and the other defendants on the ground that the jurors in the trial would read that information—despite being admonished many times not to read about the case or discuss it or listen to broadcasts about it—and would become prejudiced against the defendants.

Specifically, Justice Starkey sought to ban from publication the fact that five of the six defendants were convicted in Nassau County of kidnapping last month and two of them in essence was another part of the case now being tried.

The Times printed the information nonetheless on the ground that the order was unconstitutional, and that the information was needed for the reader to understand what was happening in this case. Yesterday, The New York Daily News printed the information, although a deputy attorney general said in court that The News had been told that it, too, was included in the gag order.

The six defendants move yesterday for a mistrial on the ground that The Times had disobeyed the gag order, and Justice Starkey said he would reserve decision on that motion until the end of the trial.

"The Times, itself, is deciding what is constitutional and what is unconstitutional," the justice said. "The Times seems to have tunnel vision, if you will. They think apparently that the Constitution is the First Amendment and they do not consider the Constitution as a whole, the rights of the defendants to have a fair trial."

Lawyers for the Times believe that there are a number of ways to protect the rights of the defendants without destroying the press's First Amendment rights freely to print information it has, and that one constitutional right is not protected by the weakening of another constitutional right.

News Prints It Too

The Times printed the information nonetheless on the ground that the order was unconstitutional, and that the information was needed for the reader to understand what was happening in this case. Yesterday, The New York Daily News printed the information, although a deputy attorney general said in court that The News had been told that it, too, was included in the gag order.

The six defendants move yesterday for a mistrial on the ground that The Times had disobeyed the gag order, and Justice Starkey said he would reserve decision on that motion until the end of the trial.

"The Times, itself, is deciding what is constitutional and what is unconstitutional," the justice said. "The Times seems to have tunnel vision, if you will. They think apparently that the Constitution is the First Amendment and they do not consider the Constitution as a whole, the rights of the defendants to have a fair trial."

Lawyers for the Times believe that there are a number of ways to protect the rights of the defendants without destroying the press's First Amendment rights freely to print information it has, and that one constitutional right is not protected by the weakening of another constitutional right.

Appeal Filed

The Times immediately appealed Justice Starkey's order to the Appellate Division, Second Department, and yesterday oral arguments were heard by Justices John P. Cohalan Jr., James D. Hopkins, Samuel E. Linn, J. Irvin Shapiro and Vito J. Titone. The Times and Miss Kleiman were represented by Floyd Abrams of the firm of Cahill, Gordon and Reindel. Justice Starkey was represented by Assistant Attorney General Dominick Tuminaro.

Mr. Abrams asked that the gag order be vacated or stayed pending final decision by the Appellate Division on whether or not to vacate it.

Mr. Abrams argued that un-

REDS ARE ACCUSED IN LISBON UPRISING

Special to The New York Times

LISBON, Tuesday, Jan. 20—A military commission has formally implicated the Communist Party and several extreme leftist groups in the coup attempt of last November.

Lengthy excerpts from what was described as a "preliminary report" on the Nov. 25 rising were broadcast by the national radio shortly after midnight.

The military leaders of the uprising were not named but it was stated that the orders for the occupation of air bases came from the Military Security Command, which has since been disbanded.

Informed sources with access to the full report said that at least one member of the Communist Party's Central Committee was named as linked to the conspiracy.

Shooting Victim Testifies at Sonny Carson Trial

By DENA KLEIMAN

A man who had been shot in the head and reportedly left for dead on a street corner in Roosevelt, L.I., took the witness stand yesterday at the murder trial of Robert C. (Sonny) Carson.

Describing the events that took place on the night he was shot, Henry A. Manley testified that a group of men had rushed into his apartment with guns and that someone had said to him, "We'll teach you about robbing black folk."

Cross-examination during the second week of the trial in State Supreme Court in Brooklyn focused on the question of who made the threatening statement.

Meanwhile, in the Appellate Division of State Supreme Court in Brooklyn, oral arguments were presented on whether a gag order against the press—issued by Justice John R. Starkey, who is presiding at the Carson trial—should be vacated.

Mr. Carson and five other men are being tried in the fatal shooting of Philip Williams of 265 Rochester Avenue, Brooklyn, on May 23, 1973, and the assault on Mr. Manley, of 235 Rochester Avenue, Brooklyn, the same evening.

The State's Charge

The prosecution has contended that Mr. Carson ordered the slaying of Mr. Manley and Mr. Williams to avenge several burglaries in a Bedford-Stuyvesant hotel.

The defense has maintained that because the police neglected to investigate the thefts, Mr. Carson organized several community residents to help retrieve the stolen goods and went to the victim's home without the intention of killing anyone.

Starting at the defendants as he spoke, Mr. Manley, who bears no visible scar from the shooting, remained steadfast in his contention that he could not recall who had made the threatening remark.

"Wasn't R. Shariff who grabbed you, put a gun to your head, and wasn't it Shariff who said, 'We'll teach you about robbing from black folks'?" asked Harold E. Levy, Mr. Carson's lawyer, referring to Raymond L. Chunn, who last week testified he had shot Mr. Manley. (Mr. Chunn is also known as Shariff.)

"Another said it," Mr. Manley replied.

"Are you sure?" "Yes. There was no other voice."

Mr. Manley, however, did not identify whose voice it was.

As the afternoon progressed, his answers became increasingly flippant.

Referring to the use of heroin, Steven another lawyer, said, "Buy it?"

"Nobody gave it to Manley," he replied.

"How did you get it?" "I bought it."

"Listen, don't you think you want?" "The trial resumes at 10 A.M. today."

City Is Seeking to Tighten Fiscal Monitoring of City

By FRANCIS X. CLINES

...with the city's ability to live within its drastic (three-year financial) recovery plan, Mr. Gerard said that "at the present time I think the city can." But he added that the establishment of a full-time Treasury Department staff on the city problem, along with the three-agency monitoring meeting next week, was an important element in his optimistic view.

The Andersen report last week to the Treasury Secretary, William E. Simon, contained repeated cautions that "effective control" over the city's budget-cutting plan was "impossible" unless the city "immediately improves the reliability and timeliness of the present financial records."

State and city fiscal specialists already are working on a permanent new system for better, less misleading accounting and budgeting, but this will not be ready until July of next year.

"There's enough to go around for all of us," Mr. Gerard said of the prospect of monitors from the Treasury, Congress, and the Emergency Financial Control Board.

Governor Carey, who is chairman of the control board, previously has said that he expects tight Federal monitoring standards beyond the state's own, and that these will be good for the city as a means of restoring investor confidence.

Monitoring by the Treasury Department and the General Accounting Office — the accounting agency of Congress — was authorized under emergency legislation by which up to $2.3-billion in short-term Federal loans are being extended to stabilize the city's cash flow and prevent default through June 1978.

The officials chiefly responsible for supplying information to state and Federal watchdogs — Deputy Mayor Kenneth S. Axelsoo and Comptroller Goldin — have promised full cooperation. Beyond seeing to the financial plan, they also are the chief designers of the city's new accounting system under guidelines set by the State Comptroller, Arthur Levitt.

Mr. Gerard indicated that the current accounting problems focused on the reliability of "the flow of information" from the numerous mayoral agencies to the Comptroller's office. Central to this, of course, is the Budget Bureau; the Mayor's fiscal powerhouse, which past it is standing by its and present city comptrollers in any case, Treasury have complained has operated automatically without adequate controls.

Supreme Court Upholds the Winner-Take-All Rule for California's Republican Presidential Primary

By LESLEY OELSNER
Special to the New York Times

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19

Supreme Court unanimously held today the constitutionality of the "winner-take-all" rule of California's Presidential primary ruling means that all 167 California delegates to the Republican National Convention in August will be cast for the contender who the most votes in the state primary in June—either President Ford or California's former Governor, Ronald Reagan.

California's delegation is the largest at the convention, and commitment of California bloc to one candidate will give that candidate important, and sizable, for the ruling, spokesmen for both Mr. Reagan and the campaign said they had assumed that the winner-take-all rule would govern the party's decision leaves California's present Democratic primary rules in effect. These provide for the proportional allotment of delegates.

They were adopted after the winner-take-all rule that California Democrats used to lead to a major political controversy when Governor George McGovern won California's Democratic state votes in the 1972 presidential campaign. The ruling reaches outside California as well, at least partially, although its effect appears to be more to leave current practices as they are, rather than to require changes.

The exact meaning of today's ruling is unclear, for the Court issued no opinion of its own but merely affirmed the decision of a three-judge Federal court convened last year to hear challenges by both a Republican and by some Democrats to their parties' primary rules. However, by affirming that ruling the high court adopted at least the basic judgment of the lower court, if not all of its reasoning. The judgment appeared to be that, within certain constitutional limits, political parties have broad power to decide how delegates to conventions are to be selected.

The three-judge court, which ruled unanimously, said in part: "Whether the voters will participate in the delegate selection process, and if so, at what stage, and whether their participation will be translated directly into delegate representation at the national convention are matters for the political parties themselves to determine, and, if the parties permit, for the states.

"Assuming the Equal Protection Clause to be applicable here, it requires only that when an election is held in the delegate selection process, the weight assigned to individual voters cannot depend on where individual voters live or whether they belong to identifiable racial or political groups."

The court, referring to the contentions that the challengers had made, added: "All that appears is that losing voters are denied convention representation, not because of their support of particular candidates, but because the candidates they have been chosen to support have lost an election. This is not a denial of equal protection."

The various challengers had attacked the primary rules as violations of both First Amendment rights of political association and of the 14th Amendment guarantee of equal protection of the laws.

The Democrats, in addition to challenging the new Democratic rule, also joined in the challenge to the winner-take-all rule of the Republicans, apparently on the chance that the Democrats might return to that rule at some point.

After the three-judge court ruled, however, rejecting all the contentions, only the Republican challenger appealed to the Supreme Court. He is James S. Graham, a lawyer from Belmont, Calif.

Only three other jurisdictions have a winner-take-all rule—Oregon, Rhode Island, and the District of Columbia. Mr. Graham contended that while the rule might have a different effect in California as to distribution of state legislators, it would have no effect in California as to distribution of state legislators.

Before the Supreme Court, both the State of California and the Republican State Central Committee of California asked that the three-judge court's ruling be affirmed.

The state said, in part, that the manner in which the national party "permits the state to select their delegates" is matter for the national party to decide, as part of the party's first amendment "association rights."

The committee said: "Voting as a bloc, the California Republican delegation may more successfully influence the national convention to nominate a Presidential candidate and adopt programs as part of the party's campaign platform that will meet with the approval not only of California Republicans, but California voters generally."

According to the three-judge court, the Supreme Court had already rejected that view of the Equal Protection Clause, in a 1971 ruling involving an Indiana statute that provided for a multimember district for the election of state legislators.

He argued, basically, that under the Equal Protection Clause, the state was prohibited from denying voters a balanced representation at the forum in which the Presidential nominee was to be chosen, the convention.

Congress Democrats Cool Ford Budget Proposal

Plan to Raise Social Security Taxes and Cut Domestic Programs Would Harm Average American

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19. — Democratic senators and representatives indicated tonight that Ford's proposals to raise Social Security taxes and cut domestic programs would harm the average American.

By DAVID E. ROSENBAUM
Special to The New York Times
The Democratic reaction to the President's programs was not surprising. In the past, Congressional sessions in years when Congress and the White House were controlled by opposing parties have tended to be filled with partisan oratory and to be relatively unproductive legislatively.

Praise by G.O.P. Leaders
The Republican leaders, Senator Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania and Representative John J. Rhodes of Arizona, praised the President's style. Mr. Scott said that he especially liked the "move toward more efficient government."

Asked Usery
KE LABOR POST
WASHINGTON, Jan. 19. — Ford has asked W. J. Usery, director of the Federal Labor Conciliation Service, to take over the post of labor mediator.

Meany is Critical
OF FORD AND BURNS
WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (UPI) — George Meany, president of the A.F.L.-C.I.O., portrayed President Ford as a political candidate whose world could not be trusted.

Stock Ownership Plan Would Defer Taxation

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19. — A form was uncertain whether Ford officially recommended tonight that the reduction of $10 in income taxes for stock ownership be deferred until next July 1.

President Ford arriving at the House. He was followed by Mike Mansfield, majority leader, Representative Thomas P. O'Neill, Senator Hugh Scott and John J. Rhodes, House minority leader, and top right, Senator Robert C. Byrd.

middle-income families if they invest in corporate stocks. While declaring that the nation "cannot realistically afford a Federal program of national health insurance," Mr. Ford said he would send to Congress a plan to provide catastrophic health insurance for the elderly and poor now covered by Medicare.

Program for 1976
Accordingly, he outlined the elements of his 1976 program, nearly all of which had become public knowledge before tonight, as follows:
While inflation is slowing to "stop it cold," Mr. Ford called for holding spending in the coming fiscal year to the $394.2 billion that he will suggest in his budget plan on Wednesday.

Concern on Intelligence
Some of the sternest language in Mr. Ford's address to Congress dealt with his longstanding concern that Congress was imposing unwarranted restrictions of foreign policy and stood ready to meet past excesses of the intelligence community by going too far in curtailing covert efforts abroad.

Muskie Will Respond
The extent of the conflict in the 1976 election following an investigation requested by Representatives John E. Moss, Democrat of California, and Benjamin S. Rosenthal, Democrat of Queens, Mr. Moss is chairman of a House commerce investigative subcommittee that is looking into problems surrounding Federal regulatory agencies.

Picketing Measure Buried
By the House in Committee
WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (AP) — Rather than trying to override President Ford's veto, the House buried the construction union picketing rights expansion bill today by returning it to the Education and Labor Committee.

Mr. Ford's speech
Mr. Ford's speech to Congress was a plea for a new realism in government. He urged Congress to support his program for 1976, which he said would be a "steady course" pursued by his Administration in 1975.

A Vision of America

President Ford's Dreams for the Nation Appear to Be Modest and Conservative

By PHILIP SHABECOFF
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19. — For weeks now, White House aides have been proclaiming that the year's State of the Union Message would display — for the first time — President Ford's vision of America.

Analysis
The President affirmed his belief in a basic article of American faith: "Life will be better here for my children than for me."

Effects of Social Programs
Massive Federal social programs, he said, worsened the economy, "trampled" on the rights of individuals and compromised American military power.

Business Tax Incentives
Rather than suggesting new public employment programs the President proposed to create jobs for the unemployed by giving tax incentives to employers.

Moderation Emphasized
However, the President also took care to represent himself as a cautious moderate who is not about to disrupt the economy and the social system in one traumatic stroke.

F.D.A. Officials Are Criticized on Stocks
WASHINGTON, Jan. 19. — Congressional auditors charged today that more than 150 officials of the Food and Drug Administration had violated Federal conflict of interest rules.

Those who filed often had obtained permission from the Civil Service Commission to let employees hold "prohibited interests" under certain circumstances.

F.D.A. Replies to Report
WASHINGTON, Jan. 19. — Responding to the G.A.O. report, the Food and Drug Administration said today that it had no conflict of interest regulations.

Stressing the complexity of the F.D.A.'s review process, an agency spokesman said that the G.A.O. report did not cite a single violation of conflict of interest rules. Rather, he added, seems to list administrative deficiencies of the past.

Precinct Caucuses in Iowa Begin Choosing Delegates

By R. W. APPLE JR.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Jan. 19 — With snow flurries in the air and temperatures below freezing across much of the state, Iowans met in precinct caucuses tonight to begin choosing their delegates to the Republican and Democratic national conventions.

It was the first step anywhere in the country toward the selection of the major-party Presidential nominees, and politicians across the nation were watching this rich agricultural and manufacturing state closely for signs of strength or weakness among the candidates.

As the caucuses began in 2,530 precincts, former Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia and Senator Birch Bayh of Indiana were the favorites among the Democrats.

The precinct meetings, held in living rooms, schools, grange halls and auditoriums in all 99 counties, were the first stage in a lengthy process. Ultimately, after county conventions, district conventions and state conventions, 47 delegates, and the state's Republicans will choose 36.

In addition to Mr. Carter and Mr. Bayh, four other Democrats campaigned actively here. They were Senator Henry M. Jackson of Washington, former Senator Fred R. Harris of Oklahoma, Representative Morris K. Udall of Arizona and Sar-

Centennial Safe Is Opened for Public View

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 — Memorabilia collected by a New York publisher nearly 100 years ago went on display today—more or less—as the outer doors of a large safe were thrown open in the Capitol.

Mrs. Dehm, who was once a wealthy woman, died in 1911. Leaving her estate—described by Mr. Watts as "little more than bills"—to Miss Sutton, the safe's key was part of the legacy and has been in the possession of Miss Sutton's relatives since her death in 1932.

Accountants' Board Clears Stans of Ethics Charge

By RICHARD PEALON

A trial board of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants has found Maurice H. Stans, former Secretary of Commerce and chief fund raiser for Richard M. Nixon's 1972 Presidential campaign, not guilty of bringing discredit on the accounting profession.

That is essentially what Mr. Stans maintained after he was fined $3,000 last May. The plea bargain he struck reduced the nature of the charges from "willful" to "negligent."

In 1776
British Troops Stormed The American Countryside.

Throughout The Land, The Cry "THE BRITISH ARE COMING" Was Heard.

NOW! 200 YEARS LATER, "THE BRITISH ARE COMING", AGAIN.

Royal Marines - The Black Watch

Presented by COLUMBIA ARTISTE FESTIVALS

Over 150 strong, Her Majesty's Mased Bands, pipes, drums and dancers will be invading our shores, in a gala tribute to America's 200th birthday.

In this lavish family entertainment, the Royal Marines, resplendent in their dazzling blue uniforms, topped by white helmets, and the legendary Black Watch, in their traditional kilts and towering headdresses, perform with the brilliant pomp and ceremony that the British alone can create.

And in this unusual tribute to the United States they play many American marches and tunes and, in part of the program, even perform in the same uniforms worn here during the Revolution.

You will thrill to the exciting display of Highland sword dancing, precision marching, and the chilling sounds of the ancient pipes and drums, coupled with the glorious music of the combined regimental bands.

This spectacular theatrical presentation will prove to be one of the most memorable events in this Bicentennial year.

Fashion: Casual Clothes Are Alive and Well

By BERNADINE MOREIS

Nailing down fashion firsts is often a tricky business. For one thing, someone is sure to say he got there even earlier. For another, what matters more than being first in line is how well the idea is executed.

But in the case of Anne Klein, everybody has prospered. About eight years ago her reinvention of sportsclothes not only brought her success and glory but also spurred other Seventh Avenue designers to pursue clothes for the casual life. More recently Paris designers have picked up the theme.

The company Miss Klein founded has branched out into other fields, including men's clothes. Under the guidance of Donna Karan, a designer Miss Klein selected before her death two years ago, the main line of casual clothes is flourishing.

Especially for summer. A cheerful, lively collection it is, replete with jackets, pants, T-shirts and an assortment of loose tops that lend themselves to lots of different alignments.

"It was fun to put together," observed Mrs. Karan, who did the assemblage with the help of Louis Dell'Olivo, her associate designer.

It looked like fun too, starting off in muted colors on the order of fatigue green, running through brilliant reds, further brightened when offset by orange, and ending up with the ultimate chic of black or black with white.

Even in Bermuda shorts, which Mrs. Karan happens to favor strongly, the black and white theme has a brilliant dash and glamor.

Striped seersucker is one of her welcome revivals, which she shows in her popular bloused jacket as well as pants and skirts.

In contrast, there are numerous flowered border prints that lend themselves to loose tops, ruffy skirts and caftans.

Strapless dresses, tank top bathing suits, billowy tops over minimal bikini pants and short jumpsuits are all part of the summer fashion scheme, as outlined by Anne Klein. And a joyful one it seems.

Just in case Mrs. Karan has missed something, the Anne Klein organization has fielded another group of sports clothes. These are for the active players of golf, tennis, boating or just exercising. They're called "action clothes," they will appear under the Penfold label, and the designers are Chuck Howard and Peter Wrigley. They also happen to be responsible for the men's clothes by the Anne Klein Studio.

For golfers, the suggestions run to short jumpsuits—very short and shown open almost to the waist. And knickers.

For tennis, dead white has been replaced by sand color clothes along with water green and banana shades, flattering without being nerve-wracking on the court. Again, the watchword is "very short," whether for separate skirts or dresses.

The plot for swimsuits is becoming quite clear. They're evenly divided between bikinis and one-piece styles. Here the maillots are in a pretty border print that doesn't detract from the fact that they fit like a second skin.

Nothing tough about any of these things, which means they're nice for dabblers as well as activists.

Everybody knows about the rage for tennis, and here comes Billie Jean King to advise people how to dress. She showed up in a simple little outfit embroidered in silver and gold sequins to introduce her line of tennis clothes for Crystal Professional Sports, a division of David Crystal, but you'd have to play as well as she does to get away with it.

For lesser players, she advocates dark green, navy or brown on the courts, and she doesn't shy away from such details as hearts appliqued on the chest or tie-tac designs with tennis balls as markers.

Some of the tennis dresses are just slightly elongated T-shirts. Others are frilly affairs in embroidered eyelet with smocking or with ribbon trimming. Bare midriff halters with separate miniskirts also have her approval. Well, not everyone who swings a racquet takes it all too seriously.

For those who do, there are T-shirts and shorts or little skirts, and plenty of warm-up suits, which look attractive in cognac and navy. Karate jackets are another suggestion as to what to wear on the way to the tennis courts.

For next fall, there will be a group of clothes called "Billie's Jeans." All are in denim and they include jumpsuits, wrapped skirts and caftans as well as jeans. All these were unveiled at the Fashion Center at 512 Seventh Avenue, after which Mrs. King conducted a tennis clinic, showing participants how to improve their strokes. After all, playing the game is important too.

Antique fabrics are the passion of Jenny Bell Whyte. But she doesn't like them hidden away in boxes or bureau drawers where they quietly disintegrate. She prefers them to be worn, where they can be seen and enjoyed and she is convinced, last longer.

Working out of her brownstone on East 94th Street, she collects old fabrics and rehabilitates them. Mostly she turns them into skirts "so I don't have to cut them up too much."

Anticipating the Bicentennial, she has, for a couple of years been collecting old American fabrics.

The biggest group is of coverlets, most handwoven in the 1830's and the 1840's, a few years after jacquard attachments were brought in from France. These make possible a variety of attractive, elaborate patterns, whose motifs include eagles, grape leaves, houses and even lions.

They're in two colors and some of them are double-faced so they can be made into reversible skirts.

Beside the ones from jacquard coverlets, Mrs. Whyte has made a skirt of Lindsey woolseye, a linen and wool fabric she estimates is 200 years old, a superpatriotic one replete with stars and stripes and injunctions to "Remember the Maine" that dates from the Spanish-American War, and a plain gabardine skirt with an Indian bead necklace at the yoke.

Most of her skirts are in the $75 to $375 range, and Mrs. Whyte will also run them up in fabrics the customer already owns. Her phone number is 369-0014.

Bruce Oldfield attracted a certain amount of attention with his smocked dresses when he came here two years ago from London to do a special collection for Bendel's Studio. Now 25, he's the head of his own business in London, and he's still smocking, using a variety of techniques to give piquancy to his jersey dresses.

Some have a sporty air, emphasized by zig-zag stitching on top of pin tucks and some are just replete with glamour. The latter include both pants and skirts with turned-under harem hemlines.

The most popular style with American store buyers turned out to be a bare-top long dress with straps that cross a patch of smocking at the center, a member of the glamour brigade.

Billie Jean King endorses colors, such as navy, green, brown, in tennis-togs at Cry.

A group of black dresses with of contrasting jersey applied to the and looking like straps also sold.

The most imaginative dress is of open sides, joined only at the side. The front and the back drape the body in a way that looks er but defies description.

The other things are more comble, though not exactly convention it's the originality that has appealed buyers in such stores as Bendel's, Ingdale's and Elizabeth Arden in New York, Nan Duskin in Philadelphia, Sakowitz in Houston.

They'll have the styles about the of March at prices starting at about

The New York Times/Barbara Leibowitz, Barbra Silverman and John Soto.

A Greek Village, a Need for Dowries Leads to Prosperous Weaving Business

By V. ROBERTS

Rhodes—In 1961, Bill Clow got off the bus in a small island village, and a British woman, who was spending her sabbatical year in Greece, took her by the hand and led her to a house she rented for 50 cents a day. Mary North Clow, 30, of Lindos, a town of 100 people, started a weaving business that combined traditional techniques with modern technology. The clothes made here are sold in boutiques in Athens and to tourists. The dowries of the women of Lindos are made of wool and are a traditional part of the island's culture. Clow sat in a room with a crackling fire in a stone house and visited a cup of tea. "I didn't expect it," she said. "I didn't know it was so good."

Clow, who did start the business in 1961, was in the words of a friend who owned a house in Lindos, a lovely village of 400 people, in the shadow of a hillside built by the Athenians. It had no bakery, no electricity, and it was still here in 1961. Clow, who had been in the business since 1961, said Mrs. Clow became a producer of British film director Bill Clow kept his studio, and in 1964 he did something that was a big step for the young woman. Mrs. Clow, who was to take over the weaving business, was something that was salable and usable in a modern context. At that point, the villagers were so poor that their main craft was weaving rugs out of rags. When they could get wool, they dyed it muted shades that were not colorfast. Mr. Clow decided to use high-quality Greek cotton, dye it bright colors in Athens, and bring the thread to Lindos for weaving. Many Lindos houses date to medieval times, with carved wooden sleeping platforms, painted ceilings and mosaic floors done in black and white pebbles. But since they are too small for a modern loom, Mr. Clow converted one of the larger buildings in town into a central workshop and opened for business. On the first day only one weaver showed up, a very pretty and very poor young woman named Amalia. Soon Mr. Clow realized that the villagers were too proud to send their daughters to work in a factory. So he announced that he was actually running a school for weaving, and the young women poured in. During the winters, the sisters made frustrating sales trips to New York. "Once we invited the whole sales department of Bloomingdale's to stay with us that summer, if they would only buy our bikinis," she laughed. A buyer at Korvette's advised, "Come back when you have an American bedspread."

But tourists were starting to flood Lindos and the reputation of the Looms spread. Jax boutique in Manhattan picked up their line. Stavros Niarchos ordered 200 yards of fabric to decorate his yacht. David Hicks, a British decorator, wandered in one day and has been using Looms yardage ever since. Scandinavian Airlines decorated its new hotel here on Rhodes. Tourism has also changed Lindos. The population has doubled. The town's best carpenter prefers to be a waiter. Local women are less willing to work, and with 20 jobs to fill at peak season, the girls would say it was impossible," said Mrs. Clow. "One day I asked them to make buttonholes, and they looked at me with hatred. I went home and wept for three days. When I came back, all the dresses were done, with perfect buttonholes. They had been so afraid of failing that they had insisted they couldn't do it."

"Elephant Pants" For two years, the women refused to make pants. Finally Melissa took a skirt pattern, and showed them how to sew up the middle. The result was a pair of "elephant pants," still a big seller. Melissa, who worked in the music business in London and has never had any formal training, designs most of the clothes in a style she calls "chic ethnic." Many of them are backless, bra-less sundresses that could not be more different from the traditional island costumes, but she often includes a bit of embroidery or some other local touch. During the winters, the sisters made frustrating sales trips to New York. "Once we invited the whole sales department of Bloomingdale's to stay with us that summer, if they would only buy our bikinis," she laughed. A buyer at Korvette's advised, "Come back when you have an American bedspread."

Population Is Up Tourism has also changed Lindos. The population has doubled. The town's best carpenter prefers to be a waiter. Local women are less willing to work, and with 20 jobs to fill at peak season, the Looms has to import weavers from the poorer villages of Rhodes. The two sisters are left with mixed feelings. Their business is starting to show some profit, and they have financed a scholarship to Athens College in Bill Clow's memory, and English classes for local schoolchildren. The women who started working for their dowries 10 years ago are now mothers themselves. But the insides of the old houses are being gutted (the exteriors are protected by law). Formica is replacing carved wood, and linoleum is covering the pebbled mosaics. Everybody wants to be modern, and the people of Lindos do not understand why those crazy English women refuse to replace their hand looms with nice new electric ones. Xtras, 356 East 19th Street

SHOP TALK

Lurking Near, All Kinds of Quirky Curiosities

By RUTH ROBINSON Looking for a gift or an accessory to add a flip to that tired winter wardrobe, or a little pizzazz to your decor? You may very well find what you want in your own neighborhood, for the city is rich in offbeat shops offering merchandise that is out of the ordinary. The following is just a sampling: Ric 'o' Rac tucked away on a residential block at 340 East 90th Street, is more like a tiny Victorian parlor chock-a-block full of curios than a shop with Joseph and Martha Bourdrez, the owners, playing host and hostess. Originally from the Netherlands, they spent years in the Orient, import their own goods from the areas they know best, mostly India and Indonesia. There are carafes of printed Indian silk ($50), Balinese wood sculptures, antique baskets from Sumatra and from Thailand, and large fish mobiles woven of palm leaves painted red, black, green or blue with touches of gold. These come in three sizes (7 feet, 5 feet and 3 feet) and cost $39, $28 and $15. Supply Mrs. Bourdrez with memorabilia—letters, photographs, scraps of silk or whatever—and in an hour or so she'll whip up a collage for you at a charge of $20. Mr. Bourdrez's frame will be extra. At Sedity, 1672 First Avenue near 88th Street, the walls are covered with silhouette sculptures by Adrian Louis, a Haitian artist, which range from $15 for little fish and birds to $200 for perhaps an elaborate round sun design. Made from oil drums hammered flat, these have a pleasing primitive quality and a patina of rust that could be tempered with paint or oil. There are lots of Haitian baskets, too, some for as little as $1. Egg baskets, so called because of their shape, are used in Haiti for carrying vegetables to market, but are a natural in the city for firewood. Xtras, 356 East 19th Street near Peter Cooper Village, deals primarily in one-of-a-kind, handmade things, and has 150 craftsmen working on consignment. Tiny water colors of country scenes matted in bright colors are $6; leather belts with buckles made of silver forks are $15, and footwarmers are $6 in children's sizes, $8 in adults. There is also a tasteful selection of jewelry including sculptured bracelets of sterling, brass and copper, at $100 and a soft pouchy leather shoulder bag lined with contrasting fabric, which can be made to order in 10 days, in six shades of brown as well as in black, oavy, green and burgundy ($45). Conscious Decision, 54 East Fourth Street, can outfit the entire family in matching T-shirts sporting condors, polar bears, dolphins, whales and the like at reasonable prices: $2 to $6 for children, $3 to $12 for adults.

Everything is made on the premises by David Klein, who also does "outure prints," for which he uses real leaves and ploe boughs. In black with a misty brown design, these are quite sophisticated enough for formal occasions. Long T-shirt dresses in the same vein sell for $50. The East Side Kid, 1270 Madison Avenue near 91st Street, credits adults and children alike with a little creativity, offering "Paint Your Own Jacket" kits complete with denim garment, brush, paints and instructions. Recommended for children (8 years of age and up) is a New York skyline or simple country scene, both designs with wide black borders, in case little fingers stray ($24.99). Grownups can color in a more complicated skyline, an eagle or a 13-star flag for $30, or give their artistic talents full rein with a blank jacket kit for $20.

Silhouette carving from Haiti depicts creatures of the sea. At Sedity.

Prisoners in Trenton Open Fire and Wound 2 Guards

By MARTIN WALDRON
TRENTON, Jan. 19—Two guards past the prison in a shabby downtown neighborhood of old houses and war house. The inmates were reportedly among those who had been kept under round-the-clock lockdown after last October's prison clash in which one inmate was slain and six were injured in a clash between two groups of inmates.

Street Blocked Off
As Trenton policemen and state troopers began massing at the prison, Third Street was blocked off to traffic and street lights were turned off so the inmates could be seen. The rioting wing protruding above the prison's gray red brick wall would not be able to spot the confusion that followed the unit's barrage of gunfire, police officials announced and then canceled plans to storm the wing in a tear gas assault. Shivering in 17-degree weather, policemen milled around the area that was bashed in an eerie light cast by flares used to replace the overhead street lights.

Assembly Will Try Again To Use Machine Counts

Special to The New York Times
ALBANY, Jan. 19—Assembly, long-standing practice of "empty-chair voting" will be eliminated. Legislature rules currently allow for what is called a "short-roll call" in which the names of the first legislator alphabetically, the majority and minority leaders and the last legislator alphabetically are called. Anyone not specifying a negative vote is considered to favor a measure whether present in the chamber or not.

Kidney Is Transplanted In 3-Month-Old Baby

Doctors at the Downstate Medical Center in Brooklyn said yesterday that they had successfully transplanted a kidney in a 3-month-old baby boy who weighed only 6 pounds 2 ounces. The infant, Alexander Kelly, was believed to be the youngest and probably the smallest child ever to receive a transplanted kidney.

LAWYER ALLEGES L.I. POLICE DEAL

Says Witness Against D.A. Wae Offered Leniency
By ROY R. SILVER
Special to The New York Times
MINEOLA, L.I., Jan. 19—A lawyer for Roger Barry Peterson charged today that the Suffolk County Police Commissioner and other police officials had promised Mr. Peterson that he would "never have to spend a day in jail" on burglary and forgery charges if he signed a statement accusing Henry F. O'Brien, the Suffolk District Attorney, of an act of sodomy.

Judge Orders Milwaukee To Desegregate Schools

Special to The New York Times
MILWAUKEE, Jan. 19—A Federal judge ruled here today that Milwaukee schools were segregated, and ordered immediate steps for integration. Acting on a suit filed in 1965 by a group of parents of black children and white children, Federal Judge John W. Reynolds said the segregation had been intentionally created and maintained by the Milwaukee School Board.

said that "we are advised that in some of the school districts employees will be exceeded from groups containing as few as two or three persons." To require a senior, experienced white member of such group," it said, "to stand aside and fargo the seniority benefits guaranteed him by the New York Education Law and his union contract, solely because a younger, less experienced member is black, is a forbidden reverse discrimination."

14 FOOD PLACES GET WARNING OF CLOSING

The Health Department has named 14 more food businesses for failing a health code inspection and warned that they faced closing orders if violations persisted on a second and final inspection. The names of the establishments cited and the actions followed:

There also was no mention of the suburbs, since the suit dealt only with Milwaukee's schools. As of Oct. 1, when the latest racial count was made, Milwaukee public schools had an enrollment of 114,180 pupils, of whom 60 percent were white, 34 percent black and 6 percent other.

Yesterday's Ultimate Weapon

By CHRISTOPHER LEHMANN-HAUPT

SOCIAL HISTORY OF THE MACHINE GUN

By John Ellis. 186 pages. Illustrated. $12.95; paperback, $4.95.

A little difficult in the age of the recall a time when the lowly machine gun was the ultimate weapon... Yet that is what John Ellis, a military historian, does superbly in his handsomely illustrated "Social History of the Machine Gun."

Drawing is a suggestion for a Gatling-equipped Camel Corps, in 1872.

China-guns (those few who had been installed in the German Army) some not very demanding target practice.

Now admittedly there is a certain tendentiousness to Mr. Ellis's argument. His tone is angrily accusatory throughout; he heaps scorn equally on those who invented the machine gun, on those who resisted its use and on the weapon itself.

Viewed Against Social Background

Still, whatever the validity of his broader conclusions, it is hard to resist the appeal of Mr. Ellis's basic assumptions—the history of technology is part and parcel of social history in general.

And even if one challenges the truth of these assumptions, one cannot deny their usefulness as a way of framing the history of weaponry. I once read a long account of the Gatling gun that was a simple matter of "technical differentials," and I can recall few readings that have been more enlightening.

Reminds a Provocative Thesis

Mr. Ellis has a most provocative thesis which is to animate his story. The machine gun came along, of course, at a point in the 19th century when the industrial revolution had advanced enough to produce sufficiently durable metals for making machine guns.

Mr. Ellis is not alone in this. He is one of a number of writers who are beginning to see the machine gun as a major factor in the development of modern warfare.

A 'New Realism'

In an election year, a President usually takes a benign view of the state of the union. President Ford last evening was no exception to this custom.

Rather than a "new realism," the President's message in foreign as well as domestic affairs reflected an old complacency. It was a standard pedestrian speech of the kind that Mr. Ford often delivered in his days as House minority leader.

The nation's economy is still affected severely by the worst recession in nearly forty years. But because of the partial recovery of recent months, Mr. Ford at least did not have to repeat the grim economic news that dominated his message a year ago.

The nation's chief concern now is that the economic upturn not peter out or be swallowed up in a resurgent inflation. Mr. Ford spoke to the inflationary worry when he urged that the extension of the tax cut beyond June be conditioned on staying within his spending ceiling.

Even accepting Mr. Ford's contention that a slowing of the growth in Federal Government spending is the most important step that could be taken to restrain inflation, it does not necessarily follow that Medicaid payments to the elderly, for example, are the right program to bear the brunt of the anti-inflation policy.

Yet that will surely be the effect in New York, California and other progressive states of the President's proposal of "block grants" in the health field. Mr. Ford resists national health insurance for all as too costly but proposes coverage of catastrophic illnesses among those over 65.

The President is on sound ground in urging that the deficit in the Social Security accounts be closed. There is no disagreement on that point. But it is highly questionable that the entire sum should be raised—as Mr. Ford suggests—out of higher taxes on workers and employers.

On a wide range of other issues—from crime to foreign affairs—it was difficult to find a new or inspiring thought in the President's message.

Let Them Find Bread

Former Gov. Ronald Reagan's plan to transfer to the state governments the bulk of existing Federal human welfare programs throws light on his brand of "conservatism." It should do much to take the ideological hokum out of currently fashionable calls for "emancipation from Washington."

Even if the poor would be able, under the Reagan doctrine, to scrape together enough money to move to a friendlier state, could the country afford a national policy that would set off another mass-migration of the poor into those urban and industrial localities which would probably retain their sense of obligation toward the destitute?

Presidential platforms for 1976 need a more positive approach to social problems than to encourage some states to rid themselves of poverty by sending the poor on their way to look for survival elsewhere.

Thailand's Democracy

The fall of Thailand's first democratically chosen Government less than one year after the elections that brought it to power is less surprising than Prime Minister Kukrit Pramoj's decision to dissolve Parliament and call new elections for April rather than leave office.

nationalization of large enterprises, more land reform, legalization of the Communist Party, curbs on foreign investment and other measures the military fear.

Mr. Kukrit's compromises so far have held off military pressure. But unless the new elections produce a more stable Parliament with fewer parties and the possibility of a stronger governing coalition, Thailand's democratic future will be in doubt.

Thunder Out of Lebanon

The sense of despair with which Lebanon's courageous Prime Minister Karami resigned Sunday must be shared by everyone concerned with the stability of the entire Middle East. The only remaining hope rests on still another shaky truce worked out late yesterday which could conceivably permit Mr. Karami to regain his post and his stabilizing influence.

The threat of disaster in the coming days and weeks is very real, involving partition of Lebanon into Christian and Moslem zones, armed intervention from Syria and parallel response from Israel, and thereafter the probability of another Middle Eastern war.

This recurrent nightmare became an awakening prospect when last week the right-wing Christian Phalange militias launched an apparent offensive to isolate and overrun Moslem communes—including Palestinian refugee camps—located within areas north of Beirut where Christian influence is greatest.

Partition, and the creation of an unequivocally Christian stronghold along the Levantine coast, has long been considered the last-ditch goal of Lebanon's Christian minority as it found its traditional dominance fading over the life of the divided nation.

The Syrian Government has repeatedly warned that it would invade and join forces with Lebanese Moslems and Palestinian main units rather than tolerate partition; leaders in Jerusalem have left no doubt that a Syrian invasion from the north and east would trigger an Israeli advance from the south.

Rivalries inside the Arab world, particularly that between Syrian President Assad and Egyptian President Sadat, have immobilized the Arab League from effective mediation up to now.

If the warring militias fall once again to implement the latest truce, they will make virtually inevitable a ruinous intervention by the Lebanese army and the P.L.O. main force, on opposing sides.

Transit Secrecy

Upper Broadway has become the latest beneficiary of bus shelters which are at long last springing up sporadically in various locations around town.

Like the majority of the city's existing bus stops, the new shelters appear determined to protect the transit system's secrecy. The shelters boast a generous expanse of space available for the posting of helpful data; yet it is used exclusively for commercial display.

The absence of maps from the shelters merely perpetuates the lack of such basic assistance to the riding public throughout the transit system. As we have often noted, few subway stations provide maps in accessible locations.

Designing a simple system of telling New Yorkers and out-of-town visitors how to get around the metropolis—a task that has been accomplished in other huge cities all over the world—ought not be impossible here, provided it is assigned to somebody who occasionally travels by bus or subway.

Convention Center: Ill-Timed Controversy

To the Editor: It is unfortunate that controversy, stirred up in part by a private developer interested in making a profit from a site over which he has control, has already developed over finding an alternate site for the West Side Convention Center.

I naturally believe that Battery Park City would make an excellent site for this facility. Even The Times, while supporting the Penn Central 34th Street yard, notes persuasive considerations for Battery Park City [editorial Jan. 18].

The most important point to keep in mind, however, is that the convention center, regardless of where it is built, is desperately needed to bolster New York City's economy.

On Jan. 5 a front-page article in The Times called attention to the city's virtual abandonment of hundreds of its seriously disturbed and handicapped children, among them our most troubled adolescents, because new "money-saving" budget procedures were preventing the Department of Social Services from providing facilities for their care and treatment.

Obscured in your Jan. 10 story of a planned Jan. 30 layoff of more city workers ordered by the Mayor is the fact that 100 of those to be fired are caseworkers responsible for investigations of child abuse and neglect.

As professional social workers in the city, I hope the Mayor would also consider an "incentive" for the harassed New Yorker, such as a return to the one-hour parking limit instead of the half-hour now prevalent throughout the city.

To Enter C.U.N.Y.

An odd premise appears to figure in current arguments in favor of retaining Open Admissions at C.U.N.Y. It is that since students unable to meet the proposed entrance requirements are not to blame for their inability, they deserve to be let in; they should not be penalized because it is not their fault that they cannot read.

It is reasonable to hold that reading ability beyond the eighth-grade level is necessary for academic success. A student without this and other qualifications is unlikely to profit from attendance at a university.

To view rejection from a university as an (undeserved) penalty is to view acceptance at a university as a right. This it certainly is not.

Our Harassed Parkers

New York is a nerve-racking city. Years ago one could enjoy lunch and a little chat in a relaxed, unburied atmosphere.

Nowadays, eating out has become a harrowing experience. Midst the conversation and the mouthfuls, there is always that anxious glance at the clock to make sure there is sufficient time to reach the car before the half-hour turns to "Violation."

Carry on, you really are doing something right. WESTFIELD, N.J., Jan. 5, 1976

The Protected Animal

To the Editor: In response to Peter's 27 Op-Ed article outlining cruelty to animals in this city, I would like to address (he hopes) a certain number of inaccuracies as they appear in your editorial.

The city, unfortunately, has no money to build on the original site on the West 44th Street pier. Nor have private developers proposing alternate sites indicated where they can raise the necessary money.

The Port Authority is currently in the midst of a sixty-day feasibility study about the Battery Park City site. One of the major areas to which this study will address itself will be financing.

In the interests of ultimately obtaining a convention center, it would be best for all to await the results of that study.

Budget Cuts vs. Abused Children

On behalf of the 5,500 members of the New York City Chapter of the National Association of Social Workers we call upon the Mayor, the Governor and the other officials who now control city funding to find some other method of cutting down city spending than by decimating child protective services.

We have two choices a Singer: return to the Stone without these products of thalidomides and other chemicals by first exposing animals. It is a form of protection that as a society we mined to support.

How to Deter Bombers

The tragic bombing at La Guardia Airport a few weeks ago has left the authorities without any clues as to the identity of the person or persons responsible. The police have indicated that they need some physical description of the person or persons to carry out their investigation.

Why not have the entire area around these lockers scanned by a video camera which could video-tape what it sees? This camera would at least provide some description of the bomber and would also likely deter such future incidents.

HARVEY W. JORGENSEN JR., Sparta, N.J., Jan. 3, 1976

Oil and the Arts

The oil companies have had a bad name at present, but I would like to applaud one aspect of their policy. Last night I watched four programs on Channel 13, the contents of which I found delightful.

I am so happy to see these super-giants promoting the arts, since culture is receiving such a beating—from libraries closing to school staff reductions (helped by the cry of the populace of "back to basics").

Carry on, you really are doing something right. WESTFIELD, N.J., Jan. 5, 1976

Of Rails and Rates

I must take vigorous issue your Jan. 5 editorial on eastern railroad legislation under review in Washington.

A discontinuance of power to maintain freight-zation between ports was mortal blow to the Port of Without equalization, valid would be diverted to port cut rates at a time when New York can ill afford loss of even one commercial ship.

While deregulation may in the abstract, its practice would be economically disastrous for the Port of NY.

As the leader of the fight for the rail freight-rate equ was privileged to include allies the members of Con represent other impacted were unwilling to deprive it its statutory authority without some insurmountable reason, deplete.

In addition, I successfully an amendment to preserve responsibility of the guarantee and maintain parity within the Port of NY.

How Do You Price Art Works? and the Dealers Count the Ways

Arnold Glimcher, owner of the Pace Gallery, with works by, clockwise from lower left, Guy Dill, Louise Nevelson and Jean Dubuffet. "Our prices are the same for everybody. We only give architects and museums 10 percent discounts."

BY GRACE GLUECK The subject of art prices, a delicate one that dealers don't like to discuss and everyone else in the art world does, has lately heated up. The interest stems from such factors as the recession, which has caused a thinning of art buyers, and a slow-down in the contemporary auction market, plus the recent case of Mark Rothko, the late Abstract Expressionist.

The lengthy Rothko trial, in which the Marlborough Gallery was successfully sued by heirs of the artist for mishandling his estate, has focused attention on art prices because of the spread between what the gallery paid the estate for Rothko paintings and what it sold them for.

"One thing the trial brought out," commented the art dealer Richard I. Feigen, "is that prices of art have a real basis, that what art is worth isn't just someone's vague idea."

Prices generally have been on the rise in the contemporary art field since World War II, partly because of inflation, but also because of the growing audience for art, the wider availability (until the recession) of discretionary income, and the increasingly sophisticated promotional techniques of art dealers.

A Variety of Factors

But individually, the price of an artist's work depends on a wide variety of factors, including quality, period, scarcity, size, how it fits in with collecting trends, the reputation of the artist and even that of his dealer.

"There is, of course, such a thing as a market price," says Leo Castelli, one of the world's most famous purveyors of contemporary art, "but that price is often based on imponderables." Recently, Mr. Castelli stirred some talk in the trade because of a letter he wrote to The New York Times suggesting that his own determination of prices might be different for different buyers, depending on such "imponderables" as his friendship with the purchaser and his collection, the frequency of his purchases and so forth.

Some dealers professed shock at this revelation; others agreed. Asked if he priced works in similar fashion, Arnold Glimcher, owner of the Pace Gallery, another leader in the contemporary field, shook his head. "Our prices are the same for everybody. We only give architects and museums 10 percent discounts," he said.

"Some dealers professed shock at this revelation; others agreed. Asked if he priced works in similar fashion, Arnold Glimcher, owner of the Pace Gallery, another leader in the contemporary field, shook his head. "Our prices are the same for everybody. We only give architects and museums 10 percent discounts," he said.

To Larry Fleischman, a partner in Kennedy Galleries, one of the largest dealers in American art of the past and present, "demand and quality" are key elements in pricing. Based on those factors, he says, "I price paintings at what I think I can get for them. In the case of established artists of the past, the price is based on what I have to pay, and the mark-up can go as high as 100 percent."

Strangers and Friends But, like Mr. Castelli, Mr. Fleischman takes care of good customers. While two strangers would pay the same price for a picture in his gallery, Mr. Fleischman said, regular buyers get preferential treatment. "For instance," he noted, "a big museum customer will pay 20 percent below the market, and my best collectors are like museums to me. I try to keep them happy."

Most contemporary dealers agree that prices for younger artists' work should start low. "It's important that a collector buy a young artist's work for as little as possible—the artist earns his price level by demand," says Mr. Glimcher. Taking as an example the work of Guy Dill, a young sculptor currently having his second show of large-scale works at Pace, the dealer stressed that the sculpture was made of steel, glass and concrete. "So for the first show we added up Jasper Johns sitting on "Brillo Box" by Andy Warhol, in "Flag" by Jasper Johns holding Sir Patrick. Here is, of course, such a thing as a market price, that that price is often based on imponderables."

The Major Events of the Day

International President Suleiman Franjich of Lebanon reportedly appealed yesterday to Rashid Karami to reconsider his resignation as Prime Minister, which has brought about a constitutional crisis. Mr. Karami appeared to be insisting that there be a cease-fire first between the Christian and Moslem factions.

National In his State of the Union Message last night, President Ford asked Congress to reduce Federal taxes and curb Government spending, to increase the earnings base of Social Security, to spur private industry in providing new jobs, and to give states and localities more leeway in the use of Federal funds for education, health and social services.

Metropolitan The United States Court of Appeals here overturned a court-ordered racial quota for New York City school principals on the ground that it was "constitutionally forbidden reverse discrimination." The quota had been imposed by a Federal district judge to protect the jobs of blacks and Puerto Ricans who were assigned relatively recently as principals or supervisors. In the reversal, the 2-to-1 decision supported a school board policy based on the seniority concept of "last-hired, first fired." (1:3-4)

Goliath, 2d in World, Loses a Chess Game To British David, 10

Special to The New York Times

LONDON, Jan. 19—Viktor Korchnoi, the Russian grandmaster who is the world's second-ranking chess player, lost a game here over the weekend to a 10-year-old boy.

"I wasn't scared of him," said Nigel Short of Atherton, Lancashire, the youngest of 30 opponents who played the grandmaster in a simultaneous match that lasted nearly seven hours Saturday evening.

"He tried to wear me down," Nigel added, "but I caught him in the end game." Mr. Korchnoi, a chain-smoking, 44-year-old native of Leningrad, who is known as an amiable sportsman as well as a tough competitor, took his only loss of the evening gracefully. He inscribed a book awarded to Nigel "in honor of your victory."

Among the world's top players for many years, Mr. Korchnoi reached the apex of his chess career late in 1974 by achieving the semifinal round in elimination matches for the world championship. He lost that round to a fellow Russian grandmaster, Anatoly Karpov, who became world champion last year when Bobby Fischer refused to defend his title. Nigel, whose ambition is to become a grandmaster, is the champion of London among youngsters under 14 years of age. Several weeks ago, in another simultaneous match, he drew with Lajos Portisch, a Hungarian grandmaster who is rated sixth in the world. The boy's victory over Mr. Korchnoi in the Young London vs. Russia match for boys and girls under 18 was a 40-move game that later prompted David Bronstein, a Russian grandmaster, to remark: "Nigel's moves were so good it looked as if the positions had been reversed and that they had been played by Korchnoi himself."

Last of the Dynamic Duo Near End of Police Trail

By SELWYN RAAB Batman has quit the Police Department, and Robin fears that he will soon be forced out. "Robin" is Robert Hantz, a 31-year-old policeman with 35 citations for bravery and excellence during eight years as a detective and officer.

The accusations against Mr. Hantz stem from his arrest last August on possession of four marijuana cigarettes in a customs check in the Bahamas. Although he pleaded guilty to the charge, Officer Hantz now protests that he is innocent and contends that he was being "persecuted" by the Police Department because of his controversial, semicelibatory background.

"I'm being used as an object lesson to discourage other cops from complaining publicly that we could be making more arrests and doing a lot more about preventing crime." Officer Hantz and former Detective David P. Greenberg, known as "Batman," were nicknamed after the comic-book "Batman and Robin" crime fighters because of their high arrest rates while they were an anticrime team in Brooklyn in the early 1970's.

Mr. Hantz said in an interview. "The medals and citations didn't mean a thing in my behalf. They were just waiting for me to make one mistake and they got lucky." Mr. Hantz was arrested last Aug. 16 in Freeport, the Bahamas, when marijuana allegedly was found in his baggage during a customs check. The policeman was with a party of 13 other American tourists who were on a group sailing and diving trip.

Mr. Hantz said that he was not supposed to be "controversial" or make too many arrests to show how effective cops can be. Francis J. McLoughlin, deputy police commissioner for public information, denied Officer Hantz's assertion that he had been singled out for punishment because of his background or complaints about police policies. Mr. McLoughlin said that every officer who was arrested here or elsewhere automatically underwent an investigation with the possibility of a departmental trial. Rebutals Charge Officer Hantz said that in recent years he had been rebuked privately by superior officers because of his lectures and interviews in which he criticized the department for allegedly discouraging officers from being aggressive and making more arrests.

City Puerto Ricans Lag in Income Gains

By DAVID VIDAL Despite significant gains in education, work experience and language skills, Puerto Ricans in New York City suffered a decline in their relative income position between 1960 and 1970, according to a new Federal report issued here.

The 138-page report issued by Herbert Bienstock, Regional Commissioner of the United States Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics, notes that since 1970 there had been rising unemployment and substantial job losses in the city, particularly in those industries where Puerto Ricans are most often found.

The report said that "the development of a current and coherent Puerto Rican identity." Data Called Dated The report is based largely on 1970 census data, which are acknowledged as being dated. However, Mr. Bienstock said in an interview that "its great value is in putting together everything we know about Puerto Ricans, particularly in New York City."

Representative Herman Badillo, Democrat of the Bronx, at whose request Mr. Bienstock said the study had been undertaken last December, said that "it should have been done a long time ago." "While it is very grim, it is unfortunately obsolete and if any, in reducing economic conditions today is even disadvantageous."

Puerto Ricans are the least well-off of all ethnic groups in New York City for which separate data are available, the report says. The 1969 median family income for Puerto Ricans was $5,575—meaning that half earn more and half earn less than this amount—was 78 percent of that for black families and 58 percent of the median for total population. Puerto Ricans represent one-tenth of the city's population according to the 1970 figures, which, the report said, are an acknowledged undercount.

Helping New York Volunteerism Gets Popular

By DEIRDRE CARMODY Recently, the New School for Social Research announced that it would hold an open public forum in one of its auditoriums at lunchtime entitled "Alive and Loving New York." The discussion was to be on the need for self-help in New York and the panel members were to include six citizens who had organized civic activities ranging from a volunteer ambulance corps to a city-wide greening program.

The forum was held a few days ago, and the 144-seat auditorium was filled to overflowing. In the audience were elderly people, middle-aged working women, businessmen, women in designer scarves and Gucci handbags, students in T-shirts and an assortment of others. Their eagerness about the subject—many spoke up at a question period after the session—was soon as evident as the orange "Love New York" buttons that were passed out at the forum and soothed up.

In the city right now there is a great deal of talk about volunteerism: whether volunteers exist in sufficient numbers; whether their willingness to take on tasks of drudgery is as fervent as their willingness to wear orange booster buttons and talk about saving New York; whether they can be reached and mobilized, and whether in fact, they are needed at all or will simply create an outrage by replacing city workers who have been dismissed. There are, of course, no answers. There is also no way of measuring whether or not ordinary citizens have stepped in in great numbers at the grass-roots level to clean up their blocks; organize against crime; reach out to the elderly, who have suffered so poignantly as a result of the crisis, and rally to buttress the city's sagging services.

3,000 Interviews a Year The Voluntary Action Center of New York City at 200 Broadway, which interviews about 3,000 prospective volunteers a year and places them in almost every kind of organization and agency in the city, reports that applicants have been coming in at a much greater rate than usual since September. The Christmas period, during which few people traditionally come to seeking volunteer work, was bustling with prospective workers this past season.

"No question about it, it's up over what it was," says Winifred Brown, administrative director of the center. "It's become the thing to do. The rolls are increasing every day." "Also, the profile of the volunteer is changing," she added. "They are now between 18 and 35, for the most part, with a great many of them in business and about 35 percent of them men." Many of the volunteers have themselves been laid off from jobs and they are ready to volunteer because they need something to do or, more seriously, because they want to keep a hand in at their professions, such as teaching. There are others who have long considered going into another field. Doing volunteer work in that field—working in a hospital, for instance—helps them determine whether they want a career in that area.

The Voluntary Action Center has recently joined with the energetic Office of Neighborhood Services, 51 Chambers Street, in recruiting, training and placing volunteer coordinators in 34 districts throughout the city. These coordinators will have the responsibility for matching local volunteers with neighborhood programs that need additional personnel.

Displacement No Problem So Far The problem of volunteers displacing city workers has apparently not become a reality so far. A spokesman for District Council 37 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees cautioned that "a dangerous delusion" could take place if untrained volunteers took over the jobs of professionals because it would appear that things were functioning as before, whereas in reality there was probably no way untrained volunteers could actually do the jobs of professionals.

"We don't have a formal position on the issue of volunteers," the spokesman said. "What we would hope for would be intelligence. We're not against patching glaring holes where it's legitimate." The needs obviously exist. It is beginning to seem as if the volunteers who can fill those needs also exist and as if on various levels, a real effort is being made to put the two together.

"The point is," said Barry Ancona, moderator of the "Alive and Loving New York" panel, "that no one with energy need sit around in New York City and wonder what to do."

Davis Cup: Can Whole Tennis World Ever Be Satisfied

The Davis Cup, subject of controversy

Ashe Subdues Gerulaitis To Win 2d W.C.T. Event

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 19 (UPI) — Top-seeded Arthur Ashe defeated Vitas Gerulaitis 6-2, 6-7, 6-4, tonight and captured his second straight World Championship Tennis tourney.

Ashe, the Wimbledon champion and winner at Columbus, Ohio, last week, extended his 1976 victory string to eight matches and pocketed $17,000. Gerulaitis earned $7,000.

Gerulaitis, the improving New Yorker, faced Ashe for the third time in his career and has yet to beat him.

Ashe overpowered his opponent in the first set breaking service in the first and seventh games. Gerulaitis took the second set by winning the tiebreaker, 7-6.

In the deciding set, Ashe broke Gerulaitis' service in the fourth game for a 3-1 lead and broke through again in the 10th game to close out the match.

By CHARLES FRIEDMAN The winds of change are swirling over tennis again, this time in the area of the Davis Cup.

The cup has traditionally stood for world team supremacy. But in recent years it has diminished in significance because the best players have not always been available to represent their countries.

Nationalism, prize money, personal feelings, freedom of choice and contractual commitments are factors in a controversy that has arisen over whether to change the Davis Cup format.

Until 1973, the cup holder had to play only one series, against the survivor of eliminations in four zones around the world, in what was called the challenge round.

In 1968, when open tennis, the mixing of amateurs and professionals in tournaments, was introduced, the cup underwent a change. In the days of amateurism, being chosen for the cup team was among the highest honors, for which a player would sacrifice almost everything.

It wasn't as if the players were strictly amateurs; the better ones were getting money "under the table."

For the Change In the vanguard of the new plan for condensing cup play is Arthur Ashe, the world's No. 1 player who heads the Association of Tennis Professionals, the players' union.

can further tennis development programs. They always look forward to playing an upset against a major country.

Against the Change The minor tennis nations, which make up most of the cup organization, treat the cup as a celebrated event with great nationalistic fervor.

Outlook The proposed change has come up several times before the Davis Cup Nations. At present it is scheduled to be considered again at a meeting in July.

The Background

The competition originated in 1900 when Dwight F. Davis, then a Harvard student, put the big silver cup up for a match between the United States and Britain.

Until 1973, the cup holder had to play only one series, against the survivor of eliminations in four zones around the world.

Sweden defeated Czechoslovakia in the 1975 final and South Africa won by default in 1974 when India refused to play the final in protest against South Africa's racial policies.

In 1968, when open tennis, the mixing of amateurs and professionals in tournaments, was introduced, the cup underwent a change. In

Team's Actions 'Appropriate,' Says Coach

By WILLIAM N. WALLACE
Special to The New York Times
MIAMI, Jan. 19—Chuck Noll, the 43-year-old coach of the Pittsburgh Steelers who played in the National Football League for seven seasons with some distinction, today defended the aggressiveness of his team in yesterday's Super Bowl game. The Dallas Cowboys, who lost to the Steelers, 21-17, thought the victors were overly and unnecessarily aggressive, especially Mel Blount, the cornerback.

Steelers' Carson a Prime Jet Candidate

By MURRAY CHASS
Special to The New York Times
MIAMI, Jan. 19—Bud Carson, the talented defensive coordinator of the two-time champion Pittsburgh Steelers, became a leading candidate today for the New York Jets' coaching job.

Bud Carson

Chuck Noll, the Pittsburgh coach, acknowledged at a news conference that the Jets had received permission to talk with Carson, the man who has molded the most menacing and impregnable defense in the National Football League.

The Steeler assistants have been puzzled and perturbed that they have generated virtually no interest in themselves as head-coach prospects.

The only previous interview of the 46-year-old Carson had for a No. 1 job was with the Kansas City Chiefs before they hired Paul Wiggin last year.

'You Don't Mess With Jack Lambert'

MIAMI, Jan. 19—When Mean Joe Greene reported to the Pittsburgh Steelers training camp in 1974, his defensive line coach, George Perles, told him, "We've got a rookie who's so mean, he doesn't even like himself."

Jack Lambert, the middle linebacker who has now been a central character on two Super Bowl championship teams in two years.

"Jack Lambert is a joy to the coaches," Chuck Noll was saying today, his eyes flashing with delight. "He is a very intense football player. From his first day in training camp, he earned the respect of his teammates. You don't mess with Jack Lambert in practice, in a game, whatever."

Whatever includes what Mean Joe Greene has in mind when he says, "If I was ever in a barroom brawl and needed somebody to go back-to-back with me, I'd want Jack Lambert to be the man."

Lambert explained. "The Cowboys were taking it to us a little, but the Steelers should be the intimidators. I can't speak for the others but it had an effect on me."

Jack Lambert is also a defender who seems to be wherever the football is: When the Steelers defeated the Oakland Raiders, 16-10, for the American Conference title, he recovered three fumbles.

Three for the Pro Bowl
"I'd like to come in and look at films," he said, "so that when I come to training camp, I'll have a better idea of what's going on."

Once a week, he got up at 6 o'clock and drove down to Pittsburgh to watch game films with Woody Widenhofer, the linebacker coach.

College Presidents Lead Move to Gain Greater Control of N.C.A.A. Policies

By GORDON S. WHITE Jr.
 Dr. Ross Fritchard, president of Arkansas State University, told delegates at last week's National Collegiate Athletic Association convention to "review and focus more carefully on what is essential" in intercollegiate athletics.

Notes: He rocked the boat during the usually dull annual N.C.A.A. awards luncheon last Thursday.

"Many of our additional aggravations are generated internally as a result of a rambunctious urge to keep up with competition," Fritchard said. "The escalating belief is that if we can match bigger athletic staffs, equalize more intensive programs of recruiting, provide a more extravagant set of facilities, we will attract the 'blue-chip' athletes who will find our stadiums and arenas. In all of this there is a peculiar regeneration of expenditure.

not unlike the drunk who increases his drinking to forget that he is a drunk."

Dr. Fritchard was the recipient of an achievement award, given to former varsity athletes 25 years after graduation. The former University of Arkansas football player ended his talk by saying: "I do feel it is appropriate to make a plea for balance, to make the suggestion that we review and focus more carefully on what is essential, and that we redefine the policy and decision-making process of this organization."

His words did not fall on totally deaf ears. The week-long convention of the N.C.A.A. may have been a turning point. There were 85 college presidents in attendance, more than double the number that attended last year's convention. They were at last week's meetings in St. Louis to influence policy and they did. Led by the presidents, the delegates refused to approve many of the economic measures proposed by the powerful N.C.A.A. Council.

Walter Byers, executive director of the N.C.A.A. and a powerful man in the association, denied that the actions against the Council proposals were a setback for the Council. He pointed out that some economy measures enacted last August at a special N.C.A.A. convention were retained.

Except for putting an end to scouting opponents in most sports, the major colleges turned down or did not act upon most money-saving matters. The presidents also came close to enacting new scholarships for athletes to replace the full athletic grant in aid. It is expected that the majority of the N.C.A.A. members will enact some form of need scholarship for athletes at the next convention while the athletically powerful institutions will retain the full athletic scholarship. A need scholarship is based upon a family's ability to pay for its boy's education and, therefore, is not always a full scholarship.

Stanley McCaffrey, president of the University of the Pacific, said: "The thrust of this issue is vital. This is the single item most criticized by other students and faculty [the full athletic scholarship]."

ge Seeks Speed Up Baseball Suit

AS CITY, Jan. 19 (AP)—Major league baseball owners and players met today to speed up the suit that could determine the future of the league.

States District Court Judge John W. Oliver had 11 attorneys to try the number of suggestions submitted by the owners to overturn a ruling by arbitrator Peter sides expressed hope they would have a stipulated settlement completed by tomorrow to give the basis from which to in the case. Judge Oliver ruled that Andy Roth of the Los Angeles Dodgers and Dave of the Montreal Canadiens had become free by playing out the year of their con-ding. If upheld by the court and on any future appeal would nullify the clause, which has club owners to un-renew a player's contract. The owners included 107 findings of fact in the brief filed with the court late Friday while the brief of the Major League Baseball Players Association included 18 suggestions. Oliver asked the players to reduce the number of suggestions he will have to review in an effort to expedite decision. He noted that the players had conceded the type of reserve clause needed.

Ed Moss of New York for the players' association said the association's position is that some modification was needed in the Oliver also noted some points that are so far apart that they are "irreconcilable." He said of the players' assumptions, Judge said the two sides in their dispute out of Commissioner John took the initiajudge said today that John did not come with any suggestion. It was obvious the who employ the player wanted the case resolved to court.

DATSUN. NOW AMERICA'S #1 SELLING IMPORT.

Why should I care?

Not many people give any thought to the fact that one auto company is outselling another. But that doesn't mean it isn't worth thinking about.

After all, Datsun outsold all other imports in 1975 for some good reasons. Probably the most important is the way Datsuns stretch gas.

But there's more to it than that. Let's look at Datsun's strong points:

Choice of Models. At a Datsun Dealer you can select from an entire economy car pool, wading right through hardtops and hatchbacks, stylish sedans and our legendary Z-Car. Wagons, too. Fourteen models in all, including America's #1 selling small pickup, Datsun's L11 Hustler.

Gas Mileage. While other cars are learning, their fuel keeps burning. Datsuns knew how to pass up a gas pump a long time ago, and we keep getting better. Right now, our champion gas squeezer, the B-210, gets an amazing 41 MPG on the highway and 29 MPG in the city. (EPA mileage estimate. Manual transmission. Your mileage may be more or less depending on the condition of your car and how you drive.)

Parts and Service. Datsun takes care of its own. You can count on a dealer network with nearly 4,000 factory-trained service technicians, and a nationwide, computer-connected parts system. Your Datsun Dealer's very big on small car experience, too.

Value and Durability. Datsun puts 'em together to stay together—with 43 years experience building today's size cars. Quality features like unibody construction, crankshafts with five main bearings and all-vinyl upholstery mean a Datsun not only saves, it survives.

The whole point is that we want you to know we're number one, but not to do a number on you. Datsun outsells other imports for good reasons: economy, durability, a wide selection of models and a fine dealer network. If you're in the market for a car, it's something you ought to care about. A lot.

Come look at number one.

By the time he's out of 8th grade America will be out of oil and gas.

Impossible?

No. It's fact. The latest U.S. Government figures indicate our proven reserves will only last:

OIL... 12 YEARS
GAS... 12 YEARS
URANIUM... 30 YEARS
COAL... 500 YEARS

These frightening numbers reveal our energy problem. And the solution. Today we use oil and gas for 75% of our needs. And coal for only 17%.

Can there be any question about what we must do? We must conserve. We must use precious oil and gas for those things only they can do. We must... make a national commitment to coal.

What is a "national commitment" to coal?

It means recognizing coal as our primary energy fuel. It means converting its power to energy that can substitute for oil and gas. It means a crash program to develop economical liquefaction and gasification of coal.

It does NOT mean coal without regard for the environment. It means reasonable regulations to protect the land, air and water and encourage the use of coal.

We must eliminate environmental extremism. We can tolerate neither those who would destroy the environment nor those who would be unduly restrictive.

It means, in short, a National Energy Program based on a foundation of Coal and Conservation.

Many are puzzled by what is happening in America. As a people we have some unique characteristics, among them ingenuity and a desire to get the job done. Yet, when it comes to solving our energy problems, we've been chasing our tails.

A simple review of our energy fuel assets—and a recognition of the peril of dependence on foreign oil—must lead those who govern and all thinking people to the obvious conclusion that Coal and Conservation is the answer to our near-future energy problems.

It's elementary... even for an 8th grader.

Market Gains 14.09; Volume High Again

Dow Finishes at 943.72 in Aggressive Buying After Early Profit Taking

By VARTANIG G. VARTAN

Stock prices surged upward on heavy volume again yesterday as buyers entered the market aggressively after a bit of profit taking in the morning. The Dow Jones industrial average, gaining 14.09 points to 943.72, closed at its best level of the day and established another 26-month high on the New York Stock Exchange.

Since the start of this year, the Dow has advanced more than 91 points while trading has shattered records on Wall Street. Throughout this spectacular climb in stock prices, the main driving forces have been declines in interest rates, signs of a pickup in the nation's economy and hopes for a slowdown in the pace of inflation.

Turnover amounted to 29.45 million shares yesterday. Significantly, volume picked up as prices rose sharply. A total of 25.94 million shares changed hands on Friday. Last week's turnover of 159.6 million shares was the highest on record.

Also regarded as favorable background factors were the expectancy of a generally optimistic tone in President Ford's State of the Union address and the industrywide trend of banks toward instituting a quarter-point cut in their prime lending rate to 6 3/4 percent.

The best gainers on the active list were Aztec Oil and Gas, up 3 1/2 to 31 1/2, and Honeywell, up 3 1/2 to 37.

Aztec Oil, which finished last year at 15 1/2, has seen its shares rocket this year because of buying offers from several companies. Yesterday, Southland Royalty offered to buy all Aztec Oil stock outstanding at $32 a share.

Comment on Honeywell Honeywell, which rose 4 points last week, benefited in part from a basically favorable comment in Barro's that pointed to the company's plans to introduce a major new computer system.

Merrill Lynch added 1 1/2 points to 19 1/2 in active trading. Part of Wall Street's rationale is that Merrill Lynch, which finished last year at 14 1/2, will benefit from the huge volume surge so far in 1976 since the firm accounts for 11 to 12 percent of all stock exchange volume.

L. B. M. rose 8 points to 250, closing at its best price in nearly two years. Buying came into this institutional favorite after it reported a 32 percent gain in fourth-quarter profits.

Among other market leaders setting 1975-76 highs were General Motors, Eastman Kodak and United States Steel. Thus, the market continued to reflect what analysts call "good leadership," while the broad list of stocks continued to advance.

Firm to Use Computer Setup for Handling Back-Office Operations for Others

By ROBERT J. COLE

In a move to take advantage of its vast Wall Street computer capability, Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. disclosed yesterday that it would handle back-office operations for other Wall Street brokers.

The step became known after Gerald Tsai Jr., the money manager who became well known to the go-go mutual fund era of a few years ago, announced that his firm had become the first Wall Street broker to reach an agreement with Merrill Lynch to act as its clearing agent.

Mr. Tsai is chairman and president of G. Tsai & Company, a New York Stock Exchange member firm that conducts most of its business with leading financial institutions.

The Tsai company now clears its transactions through Bear Stearns & Company, a leading Wall Street firm, but Mr. Tsai said the move to Merrill Lynch was "strictly a business decision."

Firm Is Expanding "We're expanding," Mr. Tsai said, "and as we branch out it's helpful to have Merrill Lynch in the same cities as we have branches."

He said that his company now had four retail offices in California and was planning to open five more, also in California, "sometime this year."

Mr. Tsai refused to say whether his clearing costs would drop at Merrill Lynch although Wall Street sources speculated that they could do so if the volume of business was sufficient.

Many leading brokerage houses handle their own back-office operations and, in fact, dropped at Merrill Lynch although Wall Street sources speculated that they could do so if the volume of business was sufficient.

By ROBERT METZ

While trading on the New York Stock Exchange has been averaging a hefty 33.4 million shares a day lately, the American Stock Exchange has meandered through an average daily turnover of 2.7 million shares, not even beginning to reach the traditional ratio of 25 to 40 percent of Big Board volume.

"The Amex is positively dragging" in the words of one observer, who adds that minutes go by without a trade. The table below, showing total 1976 stock trading on the American Exchange through last Friday and giving figures for corresponding periods to previous years back to 1968, back up the "dragging" assessment.

Table with columns: Year, Volume in millions 1st half of Jan. 1976, 1975, 1974, 1973, 1972, 1971, 1970, 1969, 1968.

Total volume in 11 days of trading on the Amex has done little more than keep pace with the daily volume on the Big Board. The experts believe that this clearly indicates that the small investor has remained on the sidelines during one of the most impressive bull markets in years.

Since the beginning of this year, the stock market, as measured by the Dow Jones industrials on the Big Board has gained more than 91 points, closing at a level of 843.72 yesterday.

There's a feeling in some investing circles that if the small investor wanted to climb on the bull market bandwagon, he may already have waited too long.

One observer notes that for the last 10 years or so the stock market has been in a "channel"—as represented by the Dow Jones industrials—fluctuating between 600 and 1000.

Jeremy Biggs, a principal of Davis Palmer & Biggs, of Mays managers, commented: "If you think the stock market is still in that channel you ought to be selling now that the market is approaching 950. Those who believe that the market might break out of that channel can buy more stocks."

"The only reason to expect that the market might break out is the belief that interest rates will continue to fall and inflation will continue to moderate. Under such circumstances, there would be little chance of a speculative blow-out."

Mr. Biggs cautioned that in 1972, the last national election year, prices improved in anticipation of the contest—as they are doing now—but showed a strong reaction on the downside when the campaign was over.

Another observer commented that if the "little guy" wanted to be smarter than the market generally gives credit for being he should look for undervalued Amex and over-the-counter stocks.

Since these have not participated in the current bull market so far, there are still good values to be found, he argued, among the best being companies in basic industries with heavy investments in plant and equipment and good penetration in their markets, and with good earnings prospects.

As for the Amex itself, while officials acknowledge that small investors have not been active and say that this explains the lack of volume in that market, they also note that their new markets for stock options and odd-lot government securities are thriving.

Prices of Mink Increase As the Supply Shrinks

Continued From Page 43. Higher mink prices was the decline in the number of skins produced. The world supply of mink skins, about 24 million five years ago, has shrunk to 16 million or 17 million. Foreign fur manufacturers have become increasingly important in the fur industry, and buyers from Italy, France, West Germany and Japan as well as the Scandinavian countries are purchasing a larger share of the available supply.

Robert Hasler, a mink breeder with a farm in Ravenna, Ohio, who was here to see how the mutations were selling, said that high costs of milk production had put hundreds of breeders out of business.

He said breeders are getting some breaks this year in food costs. They had been competing with manufacturers of pet food for available supplies of waste meat products, but in the last two years, pet owners are using more table scraps and the demand for pet food has lessened.

The Hudson's Bay Company, which obtained a charter to do business in the New World from Charles II of England in 1670, is better known for operating a large chain of stores in Canada.

Hudson's Bay, which operates more than 260 retail stores, with sales in excess of $1 billion annually, is one of the largest fur auctioneers in this country. Its facility in New York includes show rooms, fur-grading services, and storage end auction rooms.

Canadian Paper Workers Union Sets Vote on a New Wage Offer

MONTREAL, Jan. 19 (UPI)—Members of the Striking Canadian Paper Workers Union will vote later this week on a new wage offer aimed at ending a three-month strike at four mills to Quebec.

Both union officials and members of the Eastern Canada Newsprint Group refused to release details of the offer, made Saturday following an eight-day round of negotiations. Spokesmen said the union membership would have to study it before it was announced publicly. The offer affects 3,500 workers employed at Baie Comeau, Quebec; Quebec City; Dolbeau, Quebec; and Buckingham, Quebec, by the Northshore Paper Company, the Reed Paper Company, Domtar Ltd. and the

James MacLaren Paper Company, respectively. A union official would not indicate whether union negotiators would recommend acceptance or rejection, or fail to attach any recommendation, to the newspaper group's offer. There was no indication what effect a settlement with the group would have on strikes conducted by 21,900 union members for the last six months at other paper mills in Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. The widespread strikes have halved Canada's annual newspaper production of 10 million tons, and have cut into newspaper supplies among United States consumers. Canada supplies the American newspaper industry with two-thirds of its newsprint needs.

CAUTION TO HOLDERS OF RESTRICTED SECURITIES

If you're an officer or director of a public corporation or a person who acquired securities through a non-public transaction, you should know that the SEC is proposing amendments to SEC Rule 144 involving OTC stocks. These may have a serious effect on your plans to sell or make gifts of securities under the Rule.

Perhaps more serious, though, to all holders of restricted securities are the ever-present risks of "technical violations." In fact, sellers are held responsible, even if the violation is committed by their brokers without their knowledge.

So it's vitally important that you and your broker be thoroughly familiar with the complexities of Rule 144. That's why Dean Witter provides special handling for such transactions.

If you're involved with Rule 144 transactions, either individually or corporately, you'll want to stay up to date on these important changes that are taking place. We invite you to contact Dean Witter for more information. Or mail the coupon, and we will gladly send you a copy of our recent memorandum, Potential Pitfalls Facing Corporate Executives and Holders of Restricted Securities.

Mightier than Maude.

When Newsweek plus Time can deliver a larger audience than Maude can, it's time to rethink television.

What can be mightier than Maude? It's not Phyllis. Or The Six Million Dollar Man. It's not even a TV show. It's Newsweek plus Time—one of the strongest media buys you can make today: efficient, effective, and highly selective. Ask your media planning experts.

Newsweek, to start with, reaches an audience of 19 million adults—a rating of 13.6. And that's just Newsweek. Add Time and you get an unduplicated audience of 32 million adults and a rating of 22.7—larger than that of Maude, Phyllis or The Six Million Dollar Man. When you confine it to men 18 to 49 the rating jumps to 30.7. Which beats any regular prime-time TV series.

Yet you can buy Newsweek at a cost per thousand for men 18-49 that's actually less than that of the average prime-time show. And you can even buy the Newsweek plus Time combination at a cost per thousand that's comparable—particularly when you consider the quality of the audience.

Here the picture gets still brighter. With Newsweek plus Time—or Newsweek plus Sports Illustrated or Business Week—you zero in on people you just can't reach that efficiently with television alone.

As study after study shows, newsweekly readers are younger, better educated, more affluent. They do more. They buy more.

And, something else we suspect is true, they're more receptive to what a good, persuasive ad is saying. Because it's seen within the informative context of a newsweekly—instead of flashing by during a break in the entertainment on TV.

These days, with rising costs and limited availabilities, a lot of advertisers are having some second thoughts about television.

If you're among them, remember: the ratings point to the newsweeklies.

For the advertiser whose budget is limited, Newsweek, with its lower cost per thousand, is the more efficient. But consider the advantages of both. Newsweek plus Time.

It's a mighty big buy.

DENTAL EXPECTS CLINE IN PROFITS

Occidental Petroleum said yesterday that on a basis of preliminary estimates, it expected 1975 net income to decline 10% between $110 million and $170 million from 1974's restated total of $190 million. The company attributed the decline to reduced earnings in Venezuela and to previously announced write-offs in Venezuela totaling $106 million as a result of nationalization.

High Court Bars Appeal Of 2 New York Utilities

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (Reuters) — The Supreme Court declined today to review the dismissal of one of the principal antitrust claims brought against the Standard Oil Company of California, Edison Electric Inc. and the Mobil Oil Corporation by two major New York area utilities.

The plaintiffs, the Long Island Lighting Company and the Consolidated Edison Company of New York, sued for triple damages totaling $180 million and $156 million, respectively.

The principal claim in each utility's complaint was that they were damaged by a boycott of Libyan oil, begun in 1973 by the defendants and other petroleum companies, which caused prices of low-sulfur oil to rise sharply on the East Coast.

In a brief order the court turned down the appeal, which raised the same issue as a case decided last week involving Foreman-McKesson Inc. on the application of Securities and Exchange Commission law regulating "short-swing" securities sales to curb the use of insider information.

Gulf and Western purchased 29 percent of Allis-Chalmers stock but quickly sold it to the White Motors Corporation, realizing a $1 million profit. Securities law requires the owner of more than 10 percent of a company stock to report it within six months after purchase.

Since Gulf and Western owned 29 percent of Allis-Chalmers stock before its 29 percent purchase, it did not have to turn its profit over to Allis-Chalmers. The United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit so ruled and Allis-Chalmers' appeal was denied.

BURLINGTON ROAD RAISES EARNINGS

Quarter Net is Nearly Double but Year is Down 37%

By ROBERT E. BEDINGFIELD Burlington Northern Inc. reported yesterday that earnings in the fourth quarter of 1975 almost doubled, but for the first year, net income of big diversified rail system was down by more than 37 percent from the preceding year.

Directors of the company which operates 25,000 miles of road, more than any other carrier in the country, yesterday restored the stock to a dividend-paying basis for the first time since last June. The board ordered a quarterly distribution payable on March 1 of 30 cents a share to holders of record Feb. 2.

Net income for the latest quarter rose to $36.5 million, or $2.90 a share, from $19.1 million, or $1.51 a share, in the fourth quarter of 1974. For the year 1975, net dropped to $52.9 million, or $4.12 a share, from $84.3 million, or $6.65 a share, in 1974.

In issuing its report, the company said that the $4.12-a-share earnings figure reflected the elimination of a previously reported accounting change of 29 cents a share. This had been included in its accounts for the first quarter of 1975.

Railroads Seek to Lift Freight Rates by 4.7%

The nation's railroads filed yesterday a request with the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to increase freight rates by 7 percent, effective Feb. 18. After allowing for various commodities on which the carriers would not apply the higher rates, the increase would work out to about 4.7 percent.

The higher rates would bring the industry an additional $793 million annually, according to W. P. Betts, vice president of the Association of American Railroads. The last time the railroads raised their freight rates was on Oct. 11, when they effected a 2 1/2 percent increase to help offset a 5 percent wage increase that went into effect on Oct. 1.

Transportation operations produced revenues of $1.47 billion for the Burlington Northern in 1975, with $130.9 million of the total resulting from its investments in natural resources and other non-transportation ventures.

YES, YOUNG WOMEN ARE ACHIEVING MORE... SOONER.

They have high visibility. The young women who are making headway in professions once closed to them...in industries that are opening wide the doors of opportunity to them. They're that new generation of educated women who are candidly career oriented. Success motivated. Young women who know it's their time now...and are taking full advantage of it. They're realistic about what it takes to balance successful personal lives with successful professional lives...and are willing to work at both. Glamour knows because Glamour listens. Maintains an ongoing dialogue with young working women nationwide. By correspondence. And in seminars that give young women the platform they need to voice their expectations...their experiences...their insights and their values. As they will be doing this Friday in New York when members of the New York business community will meet with Glamour's 12 achievers for 1975. They'll discuss what motivated them...how they got there...how they handle success...why they work and how they spend their money. And these are the young women who will be profiled in February Glamour.
